Mussolini and Kemal. Doyle Came Back. A New Jersey Ghost. Interesting Marriage.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MUSSOLINI INTERESTS Europe, and causes excitement in France, proposing an alliance with Germany.

France understands that the suggestion calls for a military alliance, or, at least, an agreement that Germany will remain neutral in case of an Italian-French war.

MUSSOLINI OUGHT to know what such an alliance really means when war really starts.

In 1914, Italy had an alliance with Germany and the Kaiser was foolish enough to think it would stand up. It did not.

WHEN KEMAL PASHA, boss of Turkey, makes war, HE MAKES WAR. You remember that Mussolini threatened him, and Kemal replied:

"If you send Italian soldiers against me, the difficulty will be to find room to bury the number that I shall kill."

A DISPATCH FROM Turkey tells how Kemal trapped 1,000 rebellious Kurds in his Zeylan River valley, and killed every one, granting no quarter.

That sounds like old days when Mohammed himself was leader, and later when Western Europe whispered in awe the name of "the grand Turk."

THE SPIRIT of Conan Doyle has obliged by attending a seance of spiritualists. He came a long way from London, forgetting, perhaps, to allow for the eastward movement of the earth. He landed in the Bronx in upper New York City, and remarked:

"I am Conan Doyle, and I am glad to be here."

Then he asked for pencil and paper and wrote a telephone number.

More important messages probably will come later, more appropriately located.

WEST LONG BRANCH, N. J., thinks it has a ghost. It was first seen last Sunday night by a party of young people in an automobile. They threw stones at the white figure, and swear that it stood 10 feet high.

Night before last at midnight 3,000 people waited in a graveyard, borrowing courage from each other.

Twice previously the ghost had rushed and scattered small groups of watchers.

On Wednesday of the three thousand, only half a dozen women saw the spook.

Two thousand nine hundred and ninety-four, including the police, saw nothing. That's about the average for ghosts, in real tests.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that Princess Juliana, only child of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, and destined to be queen in her turn, will marry Prince Sigvard, son of the Swedish crown prince, and grandson of the Duke of Connaught.

HOW QUICKLY HUMAN conditions and feelings change. Prince Sigvard is the descendant of Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's marshals, who was the first Swedish king of his line. And Bernadotte was the son of a little French lawyer, and, as Mr. Ripley tells you, Bernadotte had tattooed on his arm the slogan of the revolution, "Death to kings."

THE ADMINISTRATION has decided not to let the nation know what secret negotiations preceded the treaty it is asked to ratify. The normal majority of rubber stamp senators will sign with eyes shut, if they must.

Hiram Johnson and a few others take the responsibility of senators, in connection with treaties, seriously.

The others take that part of the Constitution no more seriously than they do the Eighteenth Amendment.

IF THE SENATE does sign with its eyes shut and its brain uninformed, it will indicate that, like the British House of Lords, our Senate is becoming more or less of a vermiform appendix, unnecessary and sometimes dangerous.

MISS MARTHA L. CONNOLE, lady lawyer, replying to Mrs. Thomas A. Edison's statement that woman should remain in the home and out of business asks:

"The home, where is that?"

Woman has been kicked out of the home, according to Miss Connole, and finds it hard to succeed in business because "chivalry has fallen into the ash-can."

"When you see a woman working," says Lawyer Connole, "some man has fallen down on the job of providing for her support."

SCHOPENHAUER said all women were in league to compel every man to support some one woman all her life, and marriage was part of that conspiracy.

That, he said, was why women never forgive the woman whose loose life breaks up the plan.

Business seems to be interfering with it, as immorality once did.

POLICE PERIL REMOVED BY COUNCIL

Only Borough Residents Will Be Admitted; Tags to Identify Eligible Bathers

Dormont residents may swim in their Dormont Park swimming pool tomorrow without danger of being dragged out and lodged in the borough police station, Councilmen of the borough last night after a brief debate decided by a vote of 4 to 2 to open the pool to borough residents from 2 until 5:30 o'clock each Sunday afternoon.

Chester Winters, president of the body, left his chair to speak in opposition to the proposal. Dan Dougherty refused to vote for or against.

Howard Hasley proposed the change after a letter from Lee Lewellyn, a citizen, favoring the opening of the pool was read.

RESIDENTS ONLY

Dougherty asked that the original plan be amended so that its opening would be for the accommodation of Dormont residents specifically. The amendment, which was made part of the order, provides that only those who have tags will be admitted, and that these tags must be checked against the book of names and addresses. He demanded also there be no increase in the expense of operation.

Those voting for the opening were Hasley, Adam Ochsenhirt, J. Elmer Evans and Albert Staley. Supporting President Winters against the motion was Earl Lewellyn.

Dougherty explained his position on the proposal as personally for it, but said he could not be certain that the majority of the people favored the opening.

ADMITS 'WRONG' TO MOONEY

BALTIMORE, June 12.—(AP.)—John McDonald, principal prosecution witness against Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings, serving life sentences for the Preparedness Day parade bombing in San Francisco in 1916, said today he had perjured himself at the trial and now desires to "undo the wrong."

Sought in connection with efforts of the Mooney Defense League to obtain pardons for the two men, McDonald was taken into custody here after being recognized by a neighbor. He was held on a nominal charge of investigation.

Five years after the conviction of Mooney and Billings, McDonald made an affidavit at Trenton, N. J., in which he said he was not positive of his identification of either. The affidavit was used in an effort to obtain pardons.

In refusing to grant the latest pardon petition a few days ago, Gov. C. C. Young, of California, indicated his decision might be reversed if McDonald were produced to repeat his repudiation before the Governor and the Supreme Court.

RUTH ALEXANDER LEAVING HER PLANE

Miss Alexander, girl pilot, who, though unconscious, kept climbing in a tiny plane until it reached 26,000 feet, breaking her own women's world altitude record of 20,000 feet made July 4.

Aviatrix Soars 26,000 Feet And Loses Consciousness When Oxygen Runs Out

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 12.—(AP.)—An unconscious girl slumped in the cockpit of a tiny monoplane as it soared five miles above Lindbergh Field was believed today to have achieved a new altitude record for women. The plane's instruments showed that the pilot, Ruth Alexander, had bettered by 6,600 feet her mark of 20,000 feet set July 4.

In relating her experience the girl said she became unconscious when the altimeter showed 22,000 feet, her plane continuing to climb more than 4,000 feet before it hit the ceiling. She said:

"The last thing I noted was 22,000 feet. My oxygen was pretty low and I was still climbing.

"Then I looked at my altimeter and it showed 18,000 feet. I couldn't realize what was wrong and thought something was 'haywire' with the instrument.

"I looked at my oxygen. I still had the tube between my teeth and was holding the stick in my hand, but the oxygen was gone. Then I realized that I had been 'out.'

"The plane was in a gentle left bank, slowly settling. It didn't feel so good, without any oxygen, so I dived pretty sharply to about 7,000 feet, and then came down more slowly."

The girl brought her 90-horsepower, low-winged monoplane to a safe landing. She was still dazed when attendants lifted her from the plane.

BROWN MAY ASK HEARING AUG. 18

Counsel for Francis Shunk Brown are not prepared to say whether they would ask the State Supreme Court to delay the hearing on Brown's appeal to throw out the ballots cast in Luzerne County at the primary last May 20.

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Philadelphia, William P. Berkowitz, of counsel for Brown, was quoted as saying he had hoped a date about a week later would be fixed. It has been suggested August 18 be agreed upon.

The views of Pinchot and Brown have not been learned. Pinchot, resting in the Pocono Mountains, is silent. Brown is on his farm in Maryland.

Gifford Pinchot's plurality of 26,000 in Luzerne County materially assisted in giving him the Republican nomination for Governor by 20,000 over Brown. The latter alleged the ballots were illegally mutilated by perforations ordered by the Luzerne County courts to prevent frauds.

DATE CHANGED BY FRAZER

The date for hearing Brown's appeal, originally set for September 29, was changed yesterday to August 8 by Acting Chief Justice Robert S. Frazer in the absence

BEN LEVINSON ARRESTED IN POOL RAID

Posts $105 Forfeit for Hearing Monday; Police Seize List of 'Numbers'

Police raided what they termed one of the "Big Three" clearing house lottery racket headquarters at 518 Wylie avenue today and confiscated lists of numbers played in the pool.

Benny Levinson, reputed proprietor, was arrested, charged with conducting a lottery. From a large wad of bills he peeled off $105 at Central Police Station, which he posted as a forfeit to guarantee his presence at a hearing before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg Monday.

Inspector Albert Beebe began an examination of the papers seized, in an effort to estimate the amount of money handled by the alleged lottery chiefs. Only a small sum was confiscated.

"TRIES" TO COLLECT

For 10 months R. O. Cooper, 59, of 329 Southern avenue, paid out his money for numbers in the New York Clearing House pool without return, he testified in Mt. Washington police court today.

Then at last when he picked a winning number yesterday, good for $135, he couldn't collect, he said.

His complaint led to arrest of Samuel Lamfram, who runs a confectionery store at Cowan and Southern avenues, and L. Norman King, of 49 Prospect street, reputed "pickup" men, both charged with operating a lottery.

CITES "CHEATING"

Cooper testified he had given Lamfram 25 cents for what proved to be the lucky number, June 23, but couldn't collect.

Lamfram and King blamed each other for failure of Cooper to receive his winnings. They were fined $100 each by Magistrate John J. Sweeney. Both paid.

Sweeney said:

"This lottery business is straight as far as the numbers go. The trouble is the ones you place the money with are crooked and they will cheat you if they can."

Doyle's Followers Await His Message

CROWBOROUGH, Sussex, England, July 12.—(INS.)—The followers of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, novelist and pioneer in spiritualism, who was buried yesterday, awaited in confidence today the first "message" from beyond the grave, promised for Sunday night.

The distinguished psychic student and man of letters was laid to rest in the garden of his estate, Windlesham, with only a few close friends present. The funeral was devoid of the usual display of mourning.

Detroit Gangsters Slay Foe in Auto

DETROIT, July 12.—(INS.)—Samuel Cilluffo, 29, alleged racketeer, was shot and killed today in his automobile while driving here. A sedan containing four men crowded the racketeer's coupe to the curb and a volley of shots was fired. Eleven bullets were found in the slain man's body. It was the fifth gang shooting here in eight days.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 12.—Like so many marionettes, dangling inanimate upon unseen wirse and subject only to the whim that might move the fingers of fate, five men waited this morning for the peremptory call that destiny may make upon their immediate lives.

They were Horion Smith, avid after his first major championship; Bobby Jones, avid after his twelfth; Harry Cooper, the Light Herseman of the fairways; Charley Lacey, the unknown, and MacDonald Smith, known wherever golf is played, and they apparently were the only entries who had a chance to win the national open championship, scheduled to end late this afternoon over the green

Goebel Abandons Pacific Flight

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—(AP.)—Col. Arthur Goebel, trans-Pacific flier, announced cancellation of plans for his proposed flight this summer from Paris to New York.

Failure of the Yankee Doodle, specially-built low-winged monoplane, to travel faster than 157½ miles an hour in load tests, Goebel said, resulted in his decision to abandon the effort for this year.

BLUE LAW POLL CLOSES TODAY

The Blue Law poll of Allegheny County will close today, and the final results will be published Sunday.

Wilkinsburg responds with a 2 to 1 majority for repeal of the Pennsylvania Blue Law to bring to a close the separate polls of the 120 subdivisions of Allegheny County in the Blue Law canvass of the county by the Sun-Telegraph.

This last and largest borough of the county to report in the poll divides its returns in the proportions of 57 per cent for repeal of the Blue Law, 30 per cent for enforcement and 13 per cent for modification, more than two-thirds for a change in the ancient statute. The totals are:

	Men	Women	Total
Enforcement	232	155	387
Modification	127	53	180
Repeal	596	160	756

The index of sentiment in Wilkinsburg is given by 1,323 ballots cast in the poll, representing 35 per cent of the number of voters of the borough, 5,614, who took part in the May primary.

Five townships, Harmar, Indiana, Patton, Penn and Wilkins, in their complete returns in the poll, show opposition to the closed Sunday by a collective majority of 3 to 1 for repeal. Their poll total, 638 ballots, represents 23 per cent of the aggregate primary vote in the five townships. The totals are:

	Enforcement	Modification	Repeal
Harmar	13	2	35
Indiana	30	16	64
Patton	16	5	65
Penn	66	17	189
Wilkins	21	11	88

LOSS IN YEAR EXCEEDS FINES BY $35,000

Analysis of Police Records Bares Loss of 32 Cents Every Time Tag 'Vanishes'

The "fixing" activities last year cost Pittsburgh $119,000 in lost Traffic Court revenue, $35,000 more than was taken in by this branch of jurisprudence, figures disclosed today show.

On the basis of $1 for each tag, each of the 119,000 "fixed" either before or after they reached Traffic Court, represented an actual loss of that much revenue, analysis of police and public records showed.

In his report to Mayor Charles H. Kline, Traffic Magistrate William Soost announced $82,000 was collected by his court in 1929 as fines for violations.

MANY TAGS "VANISH"

Taking into consideration the cost of printing tags, clerical work in the Bureau of Traffic Planning, police court attaches' pay and general overhead, a huge loss of revenue because of "fixing" is revealed.

For the first six months of the current year 151,000 tags have been issued. This is 1,000 more than the total 1929 supply. Of these, but 41,000 reached Traffic Court. The missing 149,000 present a mystery. Motorists and motor club officials blame "fixing" for most of the disappearances.

Each time a tag is "fixed" an actual loss of 32 cents results to the city. Figures show that from the time the tag is printed and given an offender, the actual cost is 27 cents. The 5-cent additional cost represents time of Traffic Court attaches in putting on the "fix."

73-CENT PROFIT

On each tag for which "fine is collected the city makes only a profit of 73 cents. When "fixing" is considered a deficit results on the annual volume. On this basis, plus value of the magistrate's time at 75 cents on each tag when cases are discharged, the cost is $1.02 to the city treasury.

A rapidly mounting death toll from automobile accidents here during the past several months prompted the Pittsburgh Motor Club to pass a resolution asking Council for a blanket codifying ordinance on traffic violations and to eliminate tag fixing.

Civic associations, Director of Public Safety James M. Clark, Assistant Police Supt. Ben Marshall and Traffic Inspector Jacob Dorsey have condemned the practice. Orders have been issued by Clark calling for the suspension of any officer found attempting to "fix" tags.

Petty politicians approached by violators are blamed for the practice.

Ball Sets Record On Return Flight

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 12.—(AP.)—Phil C. Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, landed at Parks Airport, near East St. Louis, Ill., yesterday, five hours and nine minutes after leaving Pittsburgh. Officials of the field said it was a new record.

Ball made the trip in a plane piloted by Frank T. Dunn.

Second Man Dies in Fall While Asleep on Cliff

Police today are seeking the identity of a man, about 45, who died in Allegheny General Hospital early today from injuries suffered last night when he fell 125 feet from a precipice near the Boulevard of the Allies into a yard of the Pittsburgh Coal Company's garage at 1039 Second avenue.

Another man, about the same age, was killed when he fell down the hillside near the same spot about a month ago.

It was the belief of police that both victims had been sleeping on a grassy section near the boulevard, and, in turning in their sleep, rolled over the edge, tumbling down the hillside.

Ohio Sheriff Modifies Sunday Blue Law Order

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 12.—No arrests for "blue law" violations will be made Sunday, Sheriff William Yost announced. He said his deputies would cruise the city and county taking the names of violators and that this information would be filed with Prosecutor Jesse George in County Court Monday as basis for warrants. Arrests can be made any time within 10 days, he said.

The "blue law" order has been modified to allow sale of gas to tourists, doctors and bus operators and the municipal pool and golf course, city amusement center, has been exempted from interference.

Whether he would carry out his announced intention of confiscating Sunday newspapers, Sheriff Yost was uncertain. He may confine his activity to filing information against the distributors and hailing them into court. Some distributors, the Sheriff said, had told him they intended to defy the ban.

SENATE BALKS WHEN HOOVER SCREENS TREATY SECRETS

PACT DEBATE RESULTS IN IMPASSE

President's Backers Refuse Norris Reservation Plan; Session Resumes Monday

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service

WASHINGTON, July 12—The Senate ended one week's debate on the London Naval Treaty today with ratification of the pact no nearer than when President Hoover issued his call for the special session. Debate will be resumed Monday.

An impasse developing between the President and Senate over State Department documents relating to negotiation of the treaty only made the task of ratification more difficult. This dispute in which the President refused to turn the documents over to the Senate, provoked a proposed reservation, behind which all foes to the treaty rallied.

The reservation drafted by Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, proposed that:

"In ratifying this treaty, the Senate does so with the distinct and explicit understanding that there is no agreement, secret or otherwise, expressed or implied, between any of the parties to said treaty as to any construction that shall hereafter be given to any statement or provisions contained therein."

OPPOSED BY STIMSON

Some administration leaders immediately declared their opposition to the reservation. It was understood that Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson was opposed to it. On the other hand some Republican chieftains including Senator Vandenberg (Rep.) of Michigan, leader of the Republican "Young Guard," announced his willingness to accept it.

The treaty's opponents declared the reservation would have to be accepted or there would be no ratification. The treaty foes, while unable to defeat the treaty, can block its ratification because their group must aid the administration each day in maintaining the necessary quorum.

During the past week, the largest number of senators to respond to any roll-call was 53, of whom 17 were foes of the treaty. Should the treaty opponents withdraw from the Senate, the administration would be unable to produce a quorum and the session would terminate without ratification of the treaty.

BAD FEELING RISES

Some bad feeling has been engendered by debate thus far. Senator Hale first chided the American delegation to London for having "surrendered" to the British and Japanese and for having "sacrificed" America's national defense. This was a direct criticism of Senators Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, and Robinson (Dem.), of Arkansas, who helped negotiate the treaty.

Reed responded that the American delegates were patriotic citizens who had protected their nation's best interests. He declared the treaty either would have to be ratified or parity secured through competitive building "after years have passed and billions of dollars have been spent and another war fought."

Johnson rather placated Reed by pointing out that Messrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Elihu Root, the late Henry Cabot Lodge and the late Oscar W. Underwood had represented the United States at the 1922 conference only to have the treaty universally condemned afterwards.

Detroit Driver Dies After Clinton Crash

John McDonald, 33, 11768 Kenmore avenue, Detroit, Mich., died early today in Sewickley Valley Hospital following the crash of his automobile into a culvert on Clinton road, near Clinton, Pa. McDonald suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. Robert Watt, of Townsend avenue, Baltimore, Md., a passenger in the car, suffered slight injuries. It is believed that McDonald fell asleep at the wheel.

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 12.—Four passengers in a roadster had a narrow escape from death near Monongahela when their car slipped from the roadway, clipped off a telegraph pole and crashed over a bank. Eugene F. Boyle, 23, of Victory Hill, received internal hurts. Lawrence Daugherty, 26, Monongahela, the driver, escaped with slight bruises.

of Chief Justice Robert Von Moschzisker, who is in Europe.

Judge Frazer, in advancing the date of the hearing, waived the printing of the record and ruled that the original transcript might be used instead. Thus counsel would not have to wait for printed records and briefs and could prepare their arguments promptly, he pointed out.

Counsel for Brown in Philadelphia, when informed of the changed date, declared they could not possibly be ready at that time to argue the case. They averred "nothing was to be said" concerning whether they would ask the Supreme Court to postpone the hearing.

SUBJECT TO CHANGE

In announcing the changed date, Justice Frazer pointed out that hearing on a pending appeal may be advanced on application of either side or by the court's own motion, as in the present case. The date is still subject to change if counsel for the principals mutually agree upon a different time, he said.

The original hearing date of September 29 is about three weeks after the final date on which a candidate can qualify for a place on the ballot in the November election under a party that had not appeared in the primary.

The candidate losing the court's decision, assuming its time was determined by the original hearing date, would be out of the race entirely, unless he qualified before September 5 as an aspirant under a different party.

PINCHOT'S PLANS

Pinchot announced in Milford Thursday that he would pre-empt "at the proper moment" an independent party that would have a ticket in every congressional, senatorial and legislative district in the state. He said he would offer a place on the ticket to every candidate nominated at the Republican primary.

Pinchot branded Brown's efforts to throw out the Luzerne County vote as an attempt of "certain public utilities and gang politicians to steal the governorship."

HUNT DINOSAUR EGGS IN WEST

LOS ANGELES. — (AP.) — Tracks of giant trachodons, early Jurassic dinosaurs existing perhaps 40,000,000 or more years ago, may lead to discovery of the eggs of these prehistoric animals in the rugged regions of Northern Arizona.

Footprints of these giants have been discovered by Hubert Richardson, Indian trader, near Cameron, Ariz., and Rupert L. Larson, representing Robert S. Breyer, Los Angeles business man.

The findings were at an elevation nearly 700 feet higher than those of a dinosaur found in the same region last winter.

The nature of the terrain and the rock formation have led explorers to believe that low-lying hills of the plateau will not only yield a skeleton, but eggs of the trachodons as well.

The largest track measured more than 20 inches from the tip of the center toe to the back of the heel. It was deeply impressed in a region where prints were found in profusion, with the separation between the toes not as clearly marked as in the tracks of other trachodons in the vicinity.

BYRD PLANNING NEW EXPLOIT

CHICAGO, July 12.—(INS.)—Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd, conqueror of the two Poles, and a handful of his companions on the recent antarctic expedition departed by airplane for St. Louis this morning following a civic reception here that was almost unparalleled in Chicago's history.

Another reception awaits the explorer at St. Louis today, where he is scheduled to dedicate the Lambert-St. Louis flying field.

During the day of tribute here yesterday, Admiral Byrd disclosed that he is planning another expedition. When and where it will be he declined to say. He said:

"I do plan another expedition, but I shouldn't mention it at this time. There is too much work to be done on the last one. We came out of it with a $100,000 deficit, and I have scientific data to compile and books to write."

The day of welcome set aside for Byrd and his seven companions was climaxed last night by a banquet and reception sponsored by the Chicago Press Club and attended by 2,000 persons.

School Teachers Must Live in City

LOSS OF SCHOOL JOB STUNS MRS. DAGUE

West Va. Teacher, Deserted By Mate for Blonde Irene; Mum at News She's Fired

By AL GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., July 12.—While her husband, Walter Glenn Dague, and his sweetheart, Irene Schroeder, await action of the Lawrence County Court on motions for new trials, the still faithful school-teacher wife of the condemned man spends her time here with friends, wondering about the unexpected loss of her teaching post in West Virginia.

"Fired?" Mrs. Dague echoed faintly when told of the action of the school board yesterday.

"Why—I don't know anything about it. I haven't heard anything—"

Apparently the news stunned her.

"Well, I won't say anything. I have nothing to say until I hear from them myself."

HEARS ARGUMENTS

She was sitting in the courtroom where arguments for new trials for her husband and Mrs. Schroeder were being heard.

Dague and Irene, captured in the Arizona desert wastes last January after the slaying of Corp. Brady Paul in the Butler road two days after Christmas, hardly looked at each other in the court room.

Occasionally Mrs. Dague glanced at her husband.

As to her feelings towards the man who deserted her, however, she is silent. She says curtly:

"That's my own affair."

"I've my own life to live—and I'm doing it to my own satisfaction."

SILENT ON PLANS

She objects to the public attention focused upon her through her husband's escapades. Their two children are living with relatives in West Virginia. Mrs. Dague is spending the summer here with Mrs. Eleanor Lazear, of 608 East Long avenue. She wants to be left alone. As to her future plans she is silent.

Attorneys Ben Jarrett and Thomas W. Dickey, defense counsel, were given a week in which to file briefs of their arguments for new trials, and the commonwealth agreed to reply to them by the following Monday.

President Judge R. L. Hildebrand and his associate, James A. Chambers, who heard the arguments jointly yesterday, are expected to rule on the motion later the same week.

Should the motion be refused, it is pointed out, defense counsel may carry an appeal to the September term of the State Supreme Court which convenes in Pittsburgh September 29.

Slow Motion Films Aid Piano Pupils

PARIS.—(AP.)—Pianists, it is claimed, can acquire a good technique in a minimum of time by the use of the slow motion picture.

Mme. Louta Nouneberg, a Parisian pianist, has evolved a system for the application of these pictures to teaching. She has obtained the support of a number of eminent artists, including Iturbi, Cortot and Backhaus, who consented to play for her films.

By having them make motion pictures of the same composition she was able to analyze the effects obtained by the varying movements of the player's hands.

SMOOT, HOOVER GO TO CAMP

WASHINGTON, July 11.—(INS.)—Senator and Mrs. Reed Smoot, who had planned to spend their honeymoon in the Hawaiian Islands and were drawn instead to the sweltering Capital because of exigencies of the administration's London naval pact, today were en route to the presidential camp on the Rapidan River, with the President and the First Lady, where they will spend the week end.

The trip will be the first the Hoovers have taken together since Mrs. Hoover's back injury several months ago. She returned to the White House from the Blue Ridge mountain camp only last Sunday.

Senator and Mrs. Smoot have been house guests at the White House for the past several days.

Foe of Marriage, 103, Killed In Fall

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—(AP.)—Antone Rengly, who attributed his 103 years to bachelorhood, died from injuries received when he fell down a stairs.

"If I'd had a wife to nag me I'd been dead long ago," he often remarked.

Rengly came from Switzerland and had lived here the last 50 years.

TRUSTY WEDS GIRL DEPUTY

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., July 12.—(AP.)—Edgar Doss, serving a term in the county jail here as a housebreaker, will leave the jail as a bridegroom when he finishes his six-month term late this month.

The secret of Doss' marriage, July 5, to Miss Ruth Stephens, the county clerk's deputy, was revealed by the sheriff after Doss assumed the role of hero and helped the jailer put down an attempted jail break.

Doss, given leave as a trusty, and Miss Stephens went to Cadiz, Ky., June 25 and were married. The bride went to Seattle, Wash., and the bridegroom returned to jail. He plans to meet her in Seattle the last of July, and resume his study of electrical engineering.

A theatrical troupe Doss joined after leaving the University of Illinois at Urbana brought him to Hopkinsville the first of the year. Doss said he was intoxicated when he broke into Mollie McKee's home here, but he was given a six-month sentence.

The sheriff made him a trusty and assigned him to dust books and clean up in the county clerk's office. He soon was helping Miss Stephens, the deputy, keep books. There the romance began.

Hailstones Kept For Three Months

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va.—(INS.)—Hailstones that did a million dollars' damage a year ago last March are still in existence. A dozen of them may be seen today in the ice cream cooler of a Moundsville store. Placed there after the storm, they have been kept as large and firm as when they fell.

B. & O. SEEKS RIVER-RAIL TERMINAL

Permit Asked for Glenwood Project to Co-Ordinate Transportation Branches

Taking an important step in the co-ordination of rail and water transportation, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad yesterday applied for a federal permit to build a river terminal in the Pittsburgh district at Glenwood.

The new terminal is to be constructed on the right bank of the Monongahela River 6.7 miles above the Point. The proposed terminal will be near the Hays terminal, but on the opposite side of the river. The Baltimore terminal will be just above the railroad's bridge across the river.

WILL DREDGE HARBOR

The work planned consists of the erection of a loading pier, mooring pile clusters and ice breakers. About 25,000 cubic yards of material will be dredged to form the harbor. The railroad has not made public an estimate of the cost.

The improvement is planned principally for transferring coal from railroad cars to barges. It will have exceptional advantages for coal operators in Somerset County in reaching consumers on the rivers.

The terminal will occupy a strip of land with a frontage of 3,800 feet on the river. It will have a capacity for handling 50 loaded and 50 unloaded coal cars. The loaded cars will be passed over a hopper which will convey the coal to barges.

Traffic men state that the plan represents a new step for the railroads. In the past the carriers have opposed all river development. The terminal is a move towards co-operation in the development of river transportation which offers important advantages to this district.

DORMONT POOL OPEN SUNDAY

the pros and the antis. We checked and found that 35 per cent of the names on each were the same.

"We decided that 35 per cent of the people didn't know what they wanted. I am of the belief that after the religious requirements of the day are met, there is no harm in swimming or decent recreation during the Sunday afternoon."

President Winters declared he knew of only two people who wanted to swim Sunday afternoons, the rest being content to use the pool between 1 and 9 o'clock daily from Monday to Saturday.

"I was raised in the old-fashioned way of believing in Sunday school and having as few people as possible work on the day of rest, and I am opposed to this measure," he added.

"I am not a Puritan, but I believe opening the pool will be merely a wedge. The next thing to happen will be the opening of a Tom Thumb golf course, and then we'll be dunned by everyone to open more places. I think the opening of the pool will make for the lowering of Dormont's standards."

Winters chided Dougherty for not voting, claiming he was a proponent of the bill.

"Maybe I spoke for it, but I'm not voting, that's all," Dougherty replied.

Demand for Soups Cuts Turtle Supply

RALEIGH, N. C.—(AP.)—The popularity of the turtle, for soups and other things, is working a hardship on turtles of the North Carolina coast, says C. S. Brimley, entomologist of the state department of agriculture.

To supply the demand, great inroads have been made in the Green turtle stock of the state's coastal sector.

Brimley intimated this type of turtle might become extinct, as far as North Carolina is concerned, unless conservation measures are taken.

Prisoner to View Body Of Mother He Shot

Deputy sheriffs today were to remove George A. Woods, 22, from the Allegheny County Workhouse, so that he might see the body of his mother, Mrs. Mathilda Wood, 64, who died Thursday night as a result of a bullet wound inflicted by the son. He will be permitted to be absent from the workhouse from 10 a. m. until noon. His mother's body is at the home of a relative at 1245 Reseca place, North Side.

Woods is serving a three and one-half to seven-year term for shooting his mother in their home on the North Side. When he was tried three weeks ago the mother was carried into the court room on a stretcher and, while crying, forgave her son. Young Woods formerly was an inmate of Mayview.

There is a probability that Woods may be formally charged with murder as a result of his mother's death. An autopsy was performed on the body at the county morgue yesterday.

Bellevue Boy Drowns, Man Trying Rescue Saved

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., July 12.—Seized by cramps while swimming in the Monongahela River here last night, Claude Unger, Jr., 16, of 79 Grant avenue, Bellevue, was drowned. He was employed as a checkboy on the steamer Roosevelt.

Claude Unger

Frank Strong, 30, of the North Side, Pittsburgh, another employe on the steamer, attempted to save Unger, who in his struggles dragged Strong beneath the water. Other members of the boat crew saved Strong.

Unger and John Marquis, 15, also of Bellevue, obtained employment for their summer vacation on the boat last week. When the steamer came here yesterday on an excursion, Marquis and Unger went swimming.

Strong, hearing the boy's cries, dived from the boat and swam into the middle of the stream to rescue him. The two struggled and other boat employes who followed in a skiff, managed to save Strong.

Unger's body was recovered and later was viewed by his parents at an undertaking establishment.

Unger, a Bellevue High School student, had planned to enter Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Proxy Bride Sues for Annulment

'SPOILERS' WANT JOB, HE SAYS

J. M. Clifford, of Building Inspection Bureau, Sees Frameup for Mayor's Ally

Joseph M. Clifford, of 741 Bryn Mawr road, Fifth Ward, assistant engineer in the building inspection bureau and political ally of former President of Council James F. Malone, is the latest victim of Mayor Kline's policy—"to the victor belongs the spoils."

Clifford yesterday was suspended for five days by his superior, Safety Director James M. Clark, who said in a letter that unless Clifford made satisfactory reply to charges, he would be discharged in accordance with civil service rules.

DENIES CHARGES

The charges are "tardiness in reporting for duty, insubordination and neglect of duty in failing to comply with instructions from superiors and not keeping the filing system up to date, and absence without leave on Monday, July 7."

Clifford has forwarded to Clark a letter making specific denial to the first two charges and explained he was absent on July 7 because it was the last day of his annual two-week vacation.

Clifford issued a statement to the effect that his discharge was inspired by Harry Feldman, a city assessor and Mayor Kline's patronage dispenser in the Fifth Ward.

"TAKING JOB FOR FRIEND"

The real reason for Clifford's discharge, he averred, is Feldman's desire to make a place for a friend, Louis A. Schwartz, whom Director Clark is about to remove from the job of assistant chief clerk in the safety department.

Clifford said:

"These accusations are nothing more than petty politics in an endeavor of Harry Feldman, self-styled chairman of the Fifth Ward, to carry out his threat to me when he met me a few days ago just outside the Mayor's office and told me that I had better resign, as I was unfaithful to him politically, was no good to him, and that he would have me discharged."

NEW CASTLE GIRL SEEKS LIBERTY

Action Follows Bid by Kin Of Husband, Sherry Scion, To Have Marriage Voided

NEW YORK, July 12.—Audrey Baker Sherry, show girl and former resident of New Castle, Pa., who married Ernest Sherry as a proxy for her sister who couldn't get away from her work for the event, wants to be free again. Her counsel has filed a summons and complaint in an action to annul her marriage.

Parents of Sherry, scion of the Sherrys of restaurant fame, a week ago began proceedings to annul the marriage of their son to the actress.

The sister, Nedra Baker, a clothing model, took a honeymoon trip with Ernest, according to the legal papers.

The marriage took place January 22, according to the papers. Nedra found it impossible to take time off from her work to meet Sherry, so the sisters arranged that Audrey should marry him as a proxy.

Shortly after the marriage Nedra and Sherry left New York on a wedding trip.

When news of the proxy marriage became public, the sisters readily admitted it, explaining it was the only thing that could be done under the circumstances.

HEAT KILLS 71 SHUBERT ADDS IN MIDDLE WEST TO EARL'S WOE

CHICAGO, July 12.—(INS.)—Weather forecasters promised no relief today from the record-breaking heat wave which has stifled the Middle West for the past four days, taking an estimated toll of 71 lives.

Cities inland from the Great Lakes have consistently reported temperatures of 100 degrees or above. Sikestown, Mo., yesterday reported a temperature of 112 degrees.

Iowa's death toll of 25 leads the Central Western states, while Missouri records 24 heat deaths. Ten died in Minnesota, eight in Illinois, two in Nebraska, and two in Kansas, according to reports.

Crops and livestock throughout Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and the Northwest suffered heavily from the parching sun.

ATLANTA, July 12.—(AP.)—The South continues to swelter under a blazing sun. A record temperature of 111 at Jonesboro, Ark., and a reading of 110 at Monroe, La., represented the peak of the present heat wave yesterday.

Plot to Put Otto On Throne Revealed

VIENNA, July 12.—(AP.)—Preparations for occupation of the Hungarian throne by Prince Otto are far advanced, according to a report today in the newspaper Der Abend.

The Journal says the Legitimates will issue a declaration November 20, Otto's birthday, and they already have drafted a bill annuling the dethronement of the Emperor Charles as accomplished under duress. Another bill sets a limit to the period in office of Regent Horthy and nominates him viceroy of Paladin, so that when Otto desires he may proclaim himself king.

Christy Answers Suit for $100,000

NEW YORK, July 12.—(AP.)—The existence of a suit for $100,000 against Howard Chandler Christy brought by the Portrait Painters Gallery was disclosed when the artist's counsel filed a motion to dismiss. The motion alleged there were insufficient facts to sustain the action.

The suit is based on an alleged verbal agreement whereby the gallery was to obtain wealthy persons who wanted their portraits painted and Christy was to charge them not less than $4,500 each, giving the gallery a commission of one-third.

Carol's Defender Wounded by Writer

BUCHAREST, July 12.—(INS.)—Gen. M. Sohivsky was slightly wounded today in a saber duel with Stephen Lupescu, a newspaperman.

Sohivsky challenged Lupescu to the duel after the latter had allegedly written articles offensive to the monarch. Carol ordered medical treatment for Sohivsky and invited him to lunch.

Plane Crash Kills Two Army Airmen

HONOLULU, July 12.—(AP.)—Lieut. Ivan M. Atterbury, of Roseburg, Ore., and Staff Serg. Ralph O. Mills, of Saborus, Ills., were killed in the fall of an Army plane at Luce Field. The plane fell 900 feet.

Vesuvius Crater Filling With Lava

NAPLES, Italy, July 12.—(AP.)—The lava that has been flowing for five days in the crater of Mt. Vesuvius has invaded the whole western zone of the vast crater, which has a diameter of about half a mile.

It reached the lowest edge of the crater to the northeast, over which it threatened to pour into the "Valley of the Inferno." The flow has been so tranquil as to cause only slight uneasiness at the Vesuvian observatory.

Turf Commissioner Leaves $2,000,000

Hearing on Packers' Decree October 7

WASHINGTON, July 12.—(AP.)—Justice Bailey in the District of Columbia Supreme Court fixed October 7 for a hearing on the application by Armour and Company and other meat packing firms to amend the packers' consent decree.

The decree confined several leading packing firms to meat packing and closely related activities.

Pittsburgh Company Takes Over Resort

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., July 12.—(AP.)—The Mont Chateau Hotel, noted resort on Cheat Lake near here, was sold to the Workingman's Savings and Trust Company of Pittsburgh for $10,000 in a foreclosure sale. The Pittsburgh concern held a $40,000 mortgage on the property. Seven cottages and 60 acres of ground were included in the purchase.

The hotel was built 35 years ago. For the past eight years it had been operated by the Mont Chateau Club, Inc., under lease to Frank St. Clair.

Capone Club Beats U. S. Injunction Suit

CHICAGO, July 12.—(INS.)—Efforts of the Federal government to obtain permanent injunctions against two Cicero night life spots, said to be owned by Ralph J. Capone, appeared to have failed today.

An attempt to secure injunctions against the Cotton Club and Montmartre, ended in a legal tangle yesterday when the defense claimed five days allowed by law to file an answer after a request for dismissal was refused. It appeared that the Federal Court would close today for the summer.

CAPONE LAWYER CHARGES PLOT

MIAMI, Fla., July 12.—(AP.)—A charge that the state's testimony in the perjury trial of "Scarface" Al Capone, Chicago gangster, was a "frame-up," was made by the defense during a sharp cross-examination of state witnesses.

J. P. Gordon, of defense counsel, made the charge while questioning V. H. Hilton, secretary to Police Chief Guy Reeve. Hilton had testified that he had gone, with other police officers, to the office of Special Prosecutor Richard Hunt several days ago in reference to the case. Gordon asked:

"Wasn't that visit to get your instructions as to what to say at the trial?"

The state objected, and Gordon shouted:

"I was trying to bring out what I firmly believe—that this whole case, and the state's testimony, is a frame-up."

ASK NEW GANG QUIZ CHIEF

CHICAGO, July 12.—(INS.)—Premature publication of a letter from civic leaders demanding an abrupt change in the directorship of the Lingle murder investigation created a confused uproar in official circles today.

The letter, addressed to State's Attorney John Swanson and in effect asking the removal of Charles P. Rathbun as head of the body investigating the gangland murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, had lost virtually all of its authors today as a result of its publication in the Chicago Daily News.

Rathbun is a member of the Tribune's law firm and was placed on the state's attorney's staff to handle the Lingle inquiry.

In the letter it was indicated that information of value in the solution of the murder mystery was available to authorities. This evidence, it was hinted, would not be given an investigating body headed by a man on the legal staff of the slain reporter's former employers.

Night Club Bombed; Racketeers Blamed

NEW YORK, July 12.—(INS.)—A mystery bomb rocked the Simplon Social Club in the heart of New York's night life district early today. Windows were broken, but damage was slight. Only three persons were in the building and none was injured.

Police said racketeers may have thrown the bomb as a "scare." They said the club is owned by Nick and Peter Prunis, said at one time to have been backers of Texas Guinan.

Physician Meets Injured Wife In Hospital

While Dr. P. J. Hughes, of 326 West Thirteenth avenue, Homestead, was attending a patient in Homestead Hospital last night, hospital officials advised him that his wife, Margaret, 23, had been brought into the institution as the result of an accident at their home. Her injuries were not serious, examination disclosed.

Mrs. Hughes fell from the porch of their home when the railing upon which she was leaning gave way. She was unconscious when picked up.

MEARS SET FOR WORLD FLIGHT

CHICAGO, July 12.—(INS.)—John Henry Mears, round the world flier who will start next week on a world circling flight, prepared to take off for New York today after making minor adjustments on instruments of the monoplane he will use for the flight.

Mears, with Henry J. Brown, veteran mail pilot, at the controls, flew here yesterday from Detroit. The flight was made in two hours and two minutes. The fliers will attempt to better the round-the-world record of 21 days set by the Graf Zeppelin.

Chaliapin to Close Career in U. S. Tour

BUENOS AIRES, July 12.—(AP.)—Feodor Chaliapin, Russian basso, made his debut here last night at the Colon Theater as Boris Godunoff in the opera by that name. Critics and public acclaimed his performance.

M. Chaliapin declared that after fulfilling his contract in Buenos Aires and Chile he would go to the United States and sing there for the last time before retiring.

$30,000 Jewels Taken by Burglar

GREENWICH, Conn., July 12.—(INS.)—Jewels valued at $30,000 have been stolen from the home here of Melvin D. Truesdale, New York broker, police revealed today. The gems were taken from Mrs. Truesdale's boudoir. Truesdale is a brother of William A. Truesdale, president of the Lackawanna Railway.

California Grape Control Aide Slain

FRESNO, Cal., July 12.—(AP.)—Randal Matignon, federal grape control campaign worker, was shot and killed as he drove into the ranch property of A. Egeleo, east of here, to seek a contract signature.

Wilbur Berry, accompanying Matignon, and Mrs. Egeoleo were wounded.

Mrs. Osborne, Widow Of Diplomat, Dead

PARIS, July 12.—(AP.)—Mrs. Frances Clara Osborne, widow of the American diplomat, William McKinley Osborne, died suddenly Thursday. She was born in Blondesville, Ill., and was related to prominent families in Washington and Cleveland. Burial will be in America.

TARDIEU AVOIDS GREAT CRISIS

PARIS, July 12.—(INS.)—Sharp and vehement criticism assailed Premier Andre Tardieu today for his abrupt action in closing Parliament until November.

Forced with a vote of confidence and with questionable strength among his supporters, the Premier threw the parliamentary session into turmoil when he suddenly mounted the speaker's rostrum and read his decree terminating the current session.

By exercising this irrevocable power, Tardieu avoided what undoubtedly was the greatest crisis he has faced in his nine months in office. In the past week he has faced bedlam almost daily. Constant opposition was flung into his face by Communists, Socialists and Radicals.

By abbreviating the session, Premier Tardieu not only avoided a probable interpellation of his government on a postal employes' strike, but also postponed automatically the vote on military credits.

Building Contracts Set Year's Record

NEW YORK, July 12.—(INS.)—June contracts for new building and engineering in 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains amounted to $600,573,400, a report of the F. W. Dodge Corporation showed today. The total was a gain over June, 1929, and the largest monthly total since July of last year.

REED HITS LOW RADIO POWER

WASHINGTON, July 12.—(AP.)—Senator Reed registered a protest with the Federal Radio Commission against the present allocation of power and time to Pennsylvania radio stations, which he said was inadequate and out of proportion to the industrial importance and population of the state.

He addressed his protest to Maj. Gen. Charles McK. Saltzman, chairman of the commission, who was out of town. Other commission members said that, inasmuch as the letter was addressed to the chairman, no one would reply in his absence.

Senator Reed charged the commission with discrimination. Unless the commission takes corrective measures, the senator wrote,

"I shall feel impelled to carry the case to the President, the press and, if necessary, to Congress."

A general statement was sought of the commission with respect "to broadcasting stations in Erie, Johnstown, Lancaster and Reading," which Reed's letter stated, had endeavored, unsuccessfully, to obtain increased power.

New Yorkers Set Record for Thrift

NEW YORK, July 12.—(AP.)—Folks here are saving their money. Savings bank deposits in the city on July 1 were $3,527,403,129, an unprecedented total.

FRENCH AFTER HAULING DOWN TRI-COLOR MARCHING THROUGH MAYENCE TO ENTRAIN TO EVACUATE THE RHINELAND

Nations Need Not Fear U. S. Tariff, Coolidge Says

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., July 12.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Some foreign nations seem alarmed at our increases of duties on imports. Such alarm is not justified. On the whole the increases are moderate and generally intended only to equalize the difference between foreign and domestic costs of productions.

CALVIN COOLIDGE

It ought to be remembered that following all the recent increases in tariff rates have come large increases in imports. The only exception was due apparently to the Spanish war, but a year later large increases began. For over a generation each protective tariff has changed the basis but enlarged the market for imports.

Of course some lines may have been injured and others compelled to come in on a rate more fair to United States standards of wages and living. This is not saying the new tariffs promoted or retarded the increases. But the fact is higher rates did not decrease the former imports.

The most reasonable explanation seems to be that protection encouraged business and a more prosperous people bought more goods from abroad. Instead of being disturbed at the tariff, foreign nations should know that our general imports will be large so long as our business is good.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

German Tribunal Rules Prayer Must Change

LEIPSIC, Germany, July 12.—(AP.)—An ultra Nationalist prayer devised by the Thuringian Fascist government for the schools of this German province must be altered in a manner that will not offend the different minded, the German Supreme Court decided.

In the form presented for insertion in the school books, the court held, the prayer is unconstitutional.

One section of the prayer in question reads:

"I believe that thou wilt punish the betrayal of Germany and bless the actions of those who seek to free the fatherland."

By "betrayal" the Fascists mean the action of the German Socialists in supporting the revolution which ousted monarchism. The Supreme Court took action at the instigation of the federal government.

REPAIRS RUSHED ON BRIDGE RAIL

The Department of Public Works is planning emergency repairs to the rail of the Smithfield Street Bridge as a result of the revelation it is in such bad condition that should a number of persons lean against it, it probably would collapse and throw them into the river.

Charles M. Reppert, chief engineer for the department, announced the plan for emergency repairs to the bridge rail after it was shown in the Sun-Telegraph that at several points it was badly corroded, some of its structural members actually had fallen apart and that at least one panel was held together with wire. One bad section has been barricaded pending repairs.

Councilman John Herron said he would take steps to provide funds for the work.

RECOUNT BOARD FILES REPORT

Attorney Leander Trautman, chairman of the recount board that is checking disputed ballot boxes used in the primary last May 20, has filed with Prothonotary John Vogt a report of the findings in the Ninth District of the Second Ward.

He reported that 34 Republican ballots marked for Gifford Pinchot had no creases or folds, indicating they were deposited before the list was sealed on the box.

Four Republican ballots had identical creases, indicating they were folded together. Eleven Republican ballots were voided because of double markings, erasures and mutilations. Thirteen Republican ballots were segregated because of phantom crosses.

The list of voters contained 246 names that were legible and two that were scratched off.

VOTING BOOTHS TO BE MOVED

The Zoning Board of Adjustment will hold public hearings beginning at 9:30 a. m. Monday in room 919 City-County Building on proposals of Allegheny County officials to place voting booths in non-conforming districts.

Proposed locations are 2515 Wadsworth street and 2331 Bedford avenue, Fifth Ward; 1341 Meadville street, and 920 Kirkbride street, Twenty-fifth Ward; 1821 Pitler street, Twenty-seventh Ward.

Existing voting booths will be moved to the new locations to conform with revised ward divisions recommended by the re-districting commission.

Filling Pulpit

Make This at Home

Slenderizing the Larger Figure
Pattern 1977
Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS.

A cool and dainty summer frock, so necessary for afternoons, has lines that make you look as if you had been reducing. The softly flared collar, finished with pert bow, the cleverly pin-tucked waistline, and the pointed joining of skirt flare, are noteworthy details. The double ruffled elbow length sleeves are new and extremely becoming.

Pattern 1977 is lovely in a variety of small prints, particularly colored designs on a dark ground . . . beige on brown or blue, white on black or green, or the lovely pastel combinations so important this season. The collar, vestee and lower ruffles are cut from contrasting fabric.

May be ordered only in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Sizes 36 requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material and ¾ yard trimming.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped, or stamps, for each pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE wanted.

Our BOOK of PATTERNS for adults and children including transfer patterns is FIFTEEN CENTS. Book with pattern, 25c. Address all mail and orders to Sun-Telegraph, Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

1.—Enclose 15 cents in coins.
2.—Write clearly NUMBERS of patterns and SIZE wanted.
3.—Write or print your NAME and ADDRESS plainly.
4.—If you want SUN-TELEGRAPH Style Book send 10c extra.
5.—Address your request to

ANN HARDING

Comes Thursday to the STANLEY THEATER
in "HOLIDAY"
See Her as the Guest of the
SUN-TELEGRAPH
And Win Cash Prize, Too!

IT'S EASY. DO IT NOW!

Rules of the Contest

1. Select from today's Classified Section Four (4) Ads which you think are the Four Best Bargains offered today.
2. Copy the Ads as they appear or cut them out and paste them on a piece of paper.
3. Write a brief paragraph of not more than fifty words on each ad, telling why you think it is one of the best bargains offered today.
4. Neatness is important as it will be one of the important factors of determining the winners.
5. Date your presentation carefully and mail it not later than noon of the day following the day the ads appeared.
6. Address all replies to The Manager, Classified Department, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.
7. Thirteen prizes will be given each day. There will be Twelve Prizes of Two Guest Tickets to the Stanley Theater and one Prize of $10 cash, to the reply judged to be the best of the twelve prize winning answers.
8. In the event of a tie duplicate awards will be given to each of the tying contestants.
9. Replies will be judged and the Winners Announced in the Classified Section just as soon as possible after the replies have had time to reach this office. Watch for the announcements.

You all remember Ann Harding, the charming star of "Condemned" and "Paris Bound." You will all want to see her in her latest picture, "Holiday," which starts Thursday at the Stanley Theater.

Many Readers of the Sun-Telegraph Classified Ads Will See Her as the Guest of the Sun-Telegraph.

You have been told many times of the wonderful opportunities to save time and money advertised in the Sun-Telegraph Classified Ads. The idea of this contest is to prove it to you. Here's how! Starting today and continuing for the next three days, the Sun-Telegraph will give Two Theater Tickets to each of the twelve persons who select the Four Best Bargains advertised in the Classified Section of the current issue of the Sun-Telegraph. In addition there will be a Cash Prize of $10, each day, to the person who submits the best of the twelve prize-winning answers.

The contest is really very simple. All you need to do is to go through the Classified Ads carefully. Select the ads which appeal to you as unusual bargains, whether they tell you about a house in Crafton that can be rented for $38 per month, where you can buy a $135 saxophone for $35, or a special price on a used car. When you have decided on the best offers, copy the ads or cut them out and paste them on a piece of paper. Then after each ad write a brief paragraph of not more than fifty words telling why you think it to be one of the Best Bargains offered for the day. Remember, thirteen prizes are offered for each day and it will be easy to win. Before you start, read the rules on the left carefully.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Busy Planning Travels

Dull though July may be as a social season, there proves to be an infinite variety of small affairs going on among folks here at home, and I notice that lots of society people motor out of town for a few days or several weeks and return home again for a short time before resuming their travels. And while they are at home they usually entertain house guests. Before leaving for the summer, society entertains at luncheons or small informal dinners for two or three consecutive days.

When they finally leave, what a great many different places they choose to go, south, north, east and west, summer homes, cottages, resorts, hotels and such a vast number of places that I cannot tell you all of them.

But today I can tell you about several people who have gone, or who are going away, and of several who are entertaining house guests.

Travel Notes

Visiting the George N. Monros of Ruskin avenue, are Mrs. Monros brother, S. H. Wilms, and her mother, Mrs. Frederick Wilms. On Friday Mrs. Wilms and her son are leaving for White Sulphur Springs for two months. The Tracey W. Guthries, of Sewickley, have returned after spending several days with the Arthur W. Thompsons at their summer camp in Ligonier.

Mrs. William M. Scaife and her son, William M. Scaife, Jr., and her daughter, Dorothy, are leaving tonight for San Francisco, Cal., and will not return until August 1.

Gladys Elizabeth Over, daughter of Mrs. Arthur L. Over, of Amberson place, has gone to Merrie-Woode Camp in Sapphire, N. C., and her brother, Arthur Mead Over, is at a summer camp in Long Island. Gladys and Arthur are the niece and nephew of Mrs. James W. Over, of East road, Glen Osborne.

To Visit Saranac

Harriet Ramsburg, daughter of the Charles Ramsburgs, of East drive, Sewickley, will go to Saranac Inn, Saranac Lake, the twenty-fifth of this month, and later she will be joined there by her brother, Charles Ramsburg, Jr. Mrs. Dennis Downe, of Brooklyn, Mass., who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Stuart Holdship Robinson, of "The Barracks," in Sewickley, was honored with a luncheon given for her on Wednesday by Mrs. Franklin Nevin.

Did you know that Mrs. Charles Negley, of the Kenmawr, had gone to Atlantic City? And the William Loftus Monros have gone to Harbor Plain, Harbor Springs, Mich., accompanied by their son, William Loftus Monro, Jr.

On Tuesday Mrs. J. Bernd Rose, of Shields, leaves for Hyannisport, to stay at the summer home of her mother, Mrs. V. E. Shepard. Mr. Rose will join her in August.

The Samuel Clarke Reeds, of Murray Hill avenue, are leaving the end of this month for their summer home in Beaumaris, Canada, and will be accompanied by their daughters, Ellinor and Alice.

Canada Attracts

Mrs. Stansbury Sutton, of Alder Court, leaves the first of August for Ogunquit, Me., and tomorrow her daughter, Mrs. Donald Gwinn, formerly Oliveretta Sutton, of Aukland, O., will arrive at Alder Cour to visit her mother.

An engagement of interest to society folks here is that of Kathleen Grier Ritter, daughter of A. Howard Ritter, of Bristol, Pa., and of the late Mrs. A. H. Ritter, formerly Mary Grier Cope, sister of Mrs. Robert W. Liggett, Mrs. Benjamin Vail Marsh and Mrs. Robert Meade Smith, of Haverford, Pa.

And Kathleen is betrothed to Joseph Wilcox Jenkins Cooper, son of the J. Crossan Coopers, of Baltimore, Md. Mr. Cooper is the brother-in-law of Mrs. J. Crossan Cooper, Jr., of Baltimore, the former Eleanor M. Chalfant, of Pittsburgh.

Pledge Troth

Kathleen is a graduate of St. Mary's School, Peekskill, N. Y., and her fiance was graduated from Princeton in the class of '25. No date has been named for the wedding.

I want to say a word about the dog show in the polo field at Greensburg at 11 o'clock today. A great many Greensburg people are attending the show, of course, but very few Sewickley and Pittsburgh folks, because of the exodus to summer places. And some of the women of the Greensburg social set are holding a garden party on the polo field. Mrs. Charles Lynch is chairman of the party, and I told last week of all the other women in charge of the various booths.

Miss Katharine Lytle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Penney Lytle, has chosen August 16 as the date for her marriage. On that day she will become the bride of Hugh Halley Hanfp, son of Judge and Mrs. O. Hanfp, of St. Paul, Minn., in the garden of the Lytle summer home in Monongahela. The wedding will be a small event with only the immediate members of the families and a few intimate friends present.

August Bride

Miss Lytle has chosen her sister, Mrs. John S. C. Herron, as her matron of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Miss Marie Chalfonte, Mrs. Otis Bodey, of Harrisburg, and Mrs. Drake Pinkney, of Ridgewood, N. J.

Sailing Abroad

On July 26 Mrs. Alexander M. Brooks, of Bank and Walnut streets, Sewickley, and her niece, Mary Colwell Jennings, daughter of the Richard Gundry Jenningses, of Irwin drive, Sewickley, will sail on the Duchess of Bedford for several weeks abroad. Mrs. Brooks' son, Alexander M. Brooks, Jr., with a classmate from Yale, sailed on the Homeric last week and will be joined by his mother and cousin in Paris.

The Paul Sexton Hardys, of Edgerton avenue, and their daughter, Carol, are leaving soon for Ahmic Lake, Ontario, Can., where they will be the guests of the Uriah W. Tinkers, of Dallas avenue, at their summer home.

The Robert Wardrops, of Academy avenue, are leaving this month for Jasper Lake, Alberta, Can. Their daughter, Isabel, left Wednesday evening for Winnetka, Ill., where she will be the guest of the Edmund D. Bartletts, and will join her mother and father en route for Alberta.

The Joseph Iworths, of Aylesboro avenue, have gone to New Hampshire, with their daughters, Anna, Louise and Elizabeth, and have taken the G. H. Bakus house on Beach Hill, Dublin, which overlooks Dublin Lake, the highest lake in New Hampshire. And it is near the summer home of Commander Byrd, who arrived there only a few days ago.

The Dilworths are new in the Dublin Lake region. You'll remember that a few summers ago they leased the St. Gaudens estate in the artists-writers colony across the Connecticut River from Windsor, Vt.

Girl Hurt in Leap From Automobile

Virginia Clarke, 21, of 713 Jones avenue, North Braddock, is recovering today from her leap from an automobile, late last night, on the Greensburg pike near Forest Hills.

Taken to the Braddock General Hospital, she was treated there and sent home.

According to the two men who found her beside the road, she had jumped when the driver turned off the main highway. His identity is not known.

Archduke Leopold Imprisoned in U.S. At Own Request

NEW YORK, July 12.—An archduke, scion of one of the oldest royal houses in Europe, went to jail here voluntarily because he is in a hurry to get back to Vienna where, he said, there is a movement to replace his family on the throne.

As plain Leopold Hapsburg he was held in the tombs, charged with taking part in the fraudulent sale to a New York jeweler of a historic diamond necklace that belonged to his aunt, the Archduchess Maria Theresa of Austria.

Napoleon gave the necklace to his empress, the Hapsburg Maria Louisa, on the birth of their only son, and although it is said to be worth nearly $500,000, it was sold here last winter for $60,000.

The Archduke Leopold yesterday asked a General Sessions Court judge to set his bail aside. Being in prison, he may be tried this summer, because prison cases are given the preference here during the hot months.

OFFICIALS DENY MINE PACT

NEW YORK, July 12.—(INS)—With the conference of anthracite miners and operators, meeting here to fix a new contract effective September 1, adjourned over the week-end, an official statement today denied reports that any definite agreement had been reached. The conferences may continue for several weeks.

The operators, it was said, will not demand a cut in miners' wages this year, but hope to effect a board of arbitration or fact-finding body, whereby wages might be cut in 1931. The miners, who since 1919 have steadfastly refused to arbitrate the reduction of wages, are opposed to any agreement on wage cutting.

A statement issued by the conferees said that reports that agreement had been reached on certain issues before the joint conferences were untrue.

Negro Gold Star Mothers Start Trip

NEW YORK, July 12.—(INS.)—Fifty gold star mothers, mothers of Negro soldiers who died in France, sailed today to view cemeteries abroad. They are passengers on the American Merchant.

Husband and Wife Both Sharpshooters

BISLEY CAMP, England, July 12.—(AP.)—Mrs. J. N. Dow, of St. John, N. B., is a sharpshooter as accurate as her husband. On the Bisley rifle ranges in competition each scored 33 out of a possible 35 with seven shots at 200 yards.

EFFORT TO OUST HUSTON FAILS

WASHINGTON, July 12.—(Universal).—Claudius H. Huston was hailed today as the victor in the fight to remove him as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

That he will resign still was held a foregone conclusion. But he will tender his resignation only when he decides to step aside as committee chairman, regardless of pressure from the opposition element.

Huston's declaration he would have nothing to say regarding his resignation until after the special session of the Senate adjourns, created a buzz of gossip in party circles.

While some interpreted it to mean he would resign as soon as the session is over, others declared it might mean Huston really intends to remain as chairman until after the fall elections.

Huston seems to have emerged from the meeting of the committee officers with a new respect for his militant leadership. There is talk in the inner circles that he will stay in office until after the campaign, then retire with a vote of thanks for his accomplishments.

Pittsburgh Women Third in Tournament

CONNEAUT LAKE, Pa., July 12.—(AP.)—Mrs. F. P. Phillips, Uniontown, and Mrs. Chess Lamberton, Franklin, were third in open auction bridge in the Conneaut Lake Park tournament. Mrs. Harry Lamberton, Franklin, and Mrs. J. W. Brown, Cleveland, were fourth, and Mrs. Paul Halsinger, Indiana, Pa., and L. W. Abbott, Cleveland, were seventh.

In an extra section, Mrs. Hasinger and Mrs. Grace Lear, Pittsburgh, were third.

Plane Drops Bills Attacking Mussolini

MILAN, Italy, June 12.—(INS.)—Consternation reigned here for a time today after an unidentified airplane had circled the city dropping circulars calling for the ousting of King Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini.

Army planes pursued the craft into Switzerland, where it escaped.

The message said:

"In the name of justice and freedom, we want Italy a free republic."

Communists Attack Polish Legation

ATHENS, July 12.—(AP.)—A small band of young Communists attacked the Polish legation here last night as a protest against the recent execution of three Communists in Poland. There were no injuries and no serious damage. Four Communists were arrested.

"Mary, Mary, how does your garden grow?" You can get a lot of suggestions on how to make yours grow better from tomorrow's Farm and Garden Section.

East Liberty Club Women To Travel

Plans for summer travels are the chief topic of interest among the clubs these days, although programs are in the making and an occasional meeting or two stirs the quiescent club world. A number of East Liberty Woman's Club members will travel in a variety of directions during the summer. Their president, Mrs. Rollins A. Haddock, Jr., is once again at her summer home in Chautauqua where Mrs. Harry C. Beacom will be her guest later on. Mrs. Vida McCullough McClure is planning a Canadian motor tour with Mrs. Jane Packham Alexander in August. Mrs. E. A. Roller will spend a fortnight camping along Lake Erie. Mrs. Richard Thompson, one of the directors is home after having visited in Philadelphia and with her son, E. Bigelow Thompson, in Needham, Mass. Mrs. Sara King, second vice president, will vacation in Atlantic City and Mrs. James F. McNaul, recording secretary, expects to go to Colorado in the late summer.

Mrs. Reinhard Ullrich will return to her girlhood home in the Shenandoah Valley for a visit next month. Chautauqua will claim another member, Mrs. Charles H. Good. Mrs. F. T. Hardwig will leave shortly for Holonbar Beach, on French Creek, where she will spend the remainder of the summer at her cottage and Mrs. H. H. Sparker will go to her summer home in Bradford Woods. Mrs. Lydia Bowes will spend part of the summer in Syracuse. Mrs. George Cyphers motoring to Detroit and Chicago. Mrs. W. A. Merritt and Mrs. Edward F. Ertle both going to Chicago and Mrs. J. K. Shipley to Louisville.

Hawks' Record Try Delayed by Crash

WICHITA, Kan., July 12.—(INS.)—Instead of leaving for New York where he planned to start a cross-continental flight for a new record, Capt. Frank Hawks today was recovering from minor injuries received when his new speed plane crashed yesterday.

In a test flight the monoplane crashed while landing after the under-carriage struck telephone wires. The plane struck nose-first and turned over twice, cutting Capt. Hawks about the arm, shoulders and neck. The crash will delay Hawks' flight a month or more, it was said.

Pay Phone 'Victim' Vents Ire; Arrested

NEW YORK, July 12.—(AP.)—The grand jury is to take up the case of Fred Roth and his wrath at a pay telephone station. He put three nickels in the slot and nothing happened. Then sundry things did happen. He expressed himself so vigorously with the door of the booth open that a policeman interfered. The policeman was punched and Fred was arrested.

White House Dogs Licensed in District

WASHINGTON, July 12.—(AP.)—Five White House dogs were given legal permission to live in the District of Columbia until next July.

C. M. Towers, collector of taxes, presented free license tags to Patrick, huge Irish wolfhound; Gillette, Gordon setter; Mark, English setter; Pat, German shepherd, and Big Boy, wire-haired terrier.

Holland Princess' Engagement Denied

LONDON, July 12.—(INS.)—The reported engagement of Crown Princess Juliana of Holland to the second son of the Swedish Crown Prince was denied today by the Swedish court.

The official denial was issued after reports from The Hague said Queen Wilhelmina, now traveling in Norway with Juliana, had telegraphed a request of approval of the engagement to the Dutch cabinet.

EVENING ENSEMBLE STILL GAINING IN POPULARITY

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JULY 12.—The evening ensemble is still on the sartorial menu. For the ensemble has come back in rather subtle guise, especially for evening wear, and it is the ensemble idea that is most pronounced now. Most of us by now are adept at linking up the salient points of our day and evening clothes in a clever manner. Sometimes the shoes match the trimming of the frocks, or the wrap matches the shoes. Sometimes it is the accessories that cleverly harmonize the costume. Many frocks have wraps that match in color, but not in fabric and others reverse this pleasant idea, still keeping the ensemble motif before them. It certainly makes for variety in our clothes and absolutely precludes all fear of uniformity.

THE TRIUMPHANT march of that classic color combination, black and white, still continues, despite an extremely colorful season. For no other colors can bestow quite such an air of elegance of feeling of well-being. It should be avoided in inexpensive clothes, for it must be cleverly handled, otherwise the effect can be quite the reverse of pleasing. As an example both of the subtle ensemble and the glory of black combined with white, we would like you to give more than cursory glance to the Maggy Rouff model shown here today. It is of white georgette cut in modish lines and is worn with a half length coat of white marocain lined with black chiffon velvet. The wide scarf collar is similarly lined. Silver fox borders the sleeves and the rippling edge of the coat.

A MOST ATTRACTIVE evening frock from the new collection of Marie Bordes is depicted in the other sketch. It is made entirely of bright blue lace fitting rather closely to the figure until the flare of the circular godets which form the lower half of the skirt release the straight lines of the silhouette. Bands of matching blue taffeta in graduated width trim the skirt and the belt of stitched taffeta fastens with a blue and silver enamel clasp. Enamel jewelry is worn with the dress.

GUNS ENFORCE BOMBAY CALM

BOMBAY, July 12.—(INS.)—Guns, and bayonets bristled on the Esplanade Maidan today to prevent a recurrence of yesterday's six hours of pandemonium that reigned while independence demonstrators vainly resisted police, resulting in a casualty list of more than 100 Nationalists.

The clash occurred when followers of Mahatma Gandhi attempted to override police orders against demonstrations to recruit volunteers for the All-India Congress forces. Four times the police, armed with clubs and staves, swept into the marching ranks of the Nationalists, who offered resistance, but dispersed.

Crowds of Indian sympathizers swarmed into the streets, seriously hampering the police. Two companies of British troops stood in readiness.

Meanwhile, as a consequence to the heavy drop in share values and the unfavorable reaction to Lord Irwin's speech, the stock exchange here was closed indefinitely by the board of directors.

Graf at Base After Spitzbergen Cruise

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, July 12.—(INS.)—With an additional 5,000 miles safely tucked away in her mileage book, the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin, in charge of Commander Hugo Eckener, was back in her hangar today after a midweek cruise to Spitzbergen and back.

On the return leg of the flight to the Land of the Midnight Sun the dirigible cruised briefly over Britain, passing over Edinburgh Castle, Scapa and St. Andrews.

Wisconsin Motorists Pay on 'Easy Plan'

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

Joe Armstrong, the head man of the politicians is the most ungrammatical speaker in town, probably because he realizes that it is good politics to speak the language of the street. He often refers to "Joe Armstrong's boys and girls," meaning those to whom he has given coupls or city jobs.

Rapid Sugar, the Lyric's director, has used to be called "Rapid Fingers," himself, with a wit which we thought that all boys we know. Right now he is a serious and waits to be a poet. Flying to the Godfrey-Cabrera hop, he saw as he stepped from the plane Gerald Mc-Manus. He was wrongfully accused of murdering Arnold Rothstein. It was without any of a death-dealing propeller.

Your seasoned public speaker knows that the surest way to win a sympathetic laugh from an audience is to tell a story on himself. Vice President Curtis, at the Ebensburg show, told of many years ago returning to speak at a celebration in Kansas. En route to the celebration a taxicab driver who did not recognize Mr. Curtis revealed that last year a young fella by the name of Curtis made a few unnecessary remarks."

John McGarvey, the sportsman, points out that the late Harry Greb had the correct method of dealing with fighters who fouled him. He simply fouled back.

If Mr. Lang, the public works director, wants to make some golfing friends for himself, we can tell him how. Simply lift the 4 o'clock Sunday closing order on the Schenley links. This order was established years ago, when golf interfered with late Sunday picnickers, which it doesn't today. Even the employes at the links would like to see the order rescinded.

Prof. McIntyre, the new traffic engineer, can put on his hat and coat and go for a nice long walk, for we have solved the traffic problem and there is no more need for his job. Our solution is simple. Allow right turns against red lights as they do in Dormont.

If you have nothing to do at 4 on Thursday drop around to the Heinz House on the Pitt Campus. There you will see one, two, three or four-score men and women who teach at Pitt, first moving two steps this way, one short step that way. They are learning to dance.

Will Rogers Says:

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 12.

The Republicans are trying to get rid of the chairman of their National Committee. They can't throw him out. He knows where the body is buried. The next time they hire one, his contract will have a two weeks' cancellation clause in it. They think this fellow don't add the proper class to the party.

The Republicans want a man that will lend dignity to the office, and the Democrats want a man that will lend some money.

Yours,

WILL.

Talkie Musicals Stand On Success Brink, Romberg Says

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 12.

Talkie musicals are not dead, but stand instead on the threshold of success, according to Sigmund Romberg, composer of "The Desert Song," "New Moon" and some other famous American operettas.

Mr. Romberg, who is under contract to Warners, gives this position to me today briefly and confidently.

"I only wish everybody else would as," Mr. Romberg said. "Then we could dispose some overs and they would be six months catching up."

Mr. Romberg, Florenz Ziegfeld, Mr. Rodgers, Mr. Hart, the talk-and-sing writers of Broadway and other celebrities have flocked to Hollywood since the talkies put the country on the screen map.

There are only about 10 men in this country today who write operettas successfully, he contended. It isn't fair to judge this type of screen entertainment until you see what men like Frank Rogers and Hart and their caliber can produce.

TECHNIQUE DIFFERS

It isn't possible to take a stage operetta and turn it directly to screen use. On the stage we have to keep in mind the necessity to change scenery and to allow proper rest periods for our singers. In the talkies you can go directly from one thing to another. This means different technique and much wider opportunities. The real talkie operetta will be written directly for the screen.

Mr. Romberg's initial attempt, "Viennese Nights," looms portentously as Warners are preparing to use it as a test of the drawing power of the talkie operetta.

The marriage of Loretta Young and Grant Withers is the romance that hasn't cooled. As soon as she finishes Kindred Heart here Loretta and Grant will leave for Grant's home in Kansas City to be with his parents for the holidays. Then they will go to Reno, where Loretta will establish residence for a divorce from Grant. Then they will be married in Kansas City and return to Hollywood to live.

Loretta's contract with First National expires in August, 1931, and she has been offered a new contract at a substantial increase in salary. She has refused to sign it, however, and will not do so until she has had a vacation.

Grant has been offered a contract by Universal, but has refused to sign it. He will wait until Loretta's contract is signed before he signs his.

DICK'S FIRST BOW

An amusing story is told of Dick Barthelmess' first personal appearance. It seems that when Dick's picture "The Patent Leather Kid" opened here at the Circle Theater, Milton Sills, the master of ceremonies, committed a faux-pas. To be more precise, he said that Dick had been away for a long time, but that he was returning at last in a role that befitted young America.

This scorched Dick so much that when Sills' picture "The Barker" was due to open in the same theater, he consented to be master of ceremony. Furthermore, he let it get quietly about that he was going to have several things to say about Sills.

The latter had some anxious moments, but when the night came, Dick paid him a generous tribute.

PLAYERS NUMBERED

For some reason, Fox is being very mysterious about its new musical, "Just Imagine."

They admit that De Sylva, Brown and Henderson are the composers, and that the picture is to have five songs and two dance ensembles, but the identities of the characters are shrouded by numbers. Maureen O'Sullivan is known as L-85, Ken Thompson, the heavy, as X-X-3 and El Brendel as O.

You guess why. They says it isn't a gag.

STUDY INVALUES

In the old days actors were a drug on the market. Hallam Cooley illustrates the point with the story of his first picture engagement. It was in a serial at the Selig Zoo and Hallam was required to enter the cage of a lion. He did so and the lion immediately objected. Looking around for protection, Hallam was dismayed to see no firearms in the vicinity. Finally, he espied a property man standing in the wings with a broom. He shouted:

M. O'Sullivan

"Hey, he shouted, where are your guns?"

"What do you mean, guns?" responded the boss attendant. "That lion cost a lot of dough and we ain't going to have him killed."

Sam Wood's battle cry: "Not all of the scenes be made outside. Right of Juan 6. The cast is self-contained. Was with a boat in mid-channel between the sea and Catalina, and the camera and microphone would up the flare of the footlights and the distant boom of exploding [illegible] works in the beach chairs."

CHAMPION EXILE

Hollywood's champion exile is Dorothy Janis. Though she has appeared in five pictures [illegible] she has worked only three weeks in the five months.

She went to the South Seas for "The Pagan," to Arizona for her next picture, to Canada and to Oklahoma for two succeeding ones and now she is on her way to Borneo with the Universal company filming Conrad's "Outcast of the Islands."

Dorothy Janis

From Hong Kong comes a pessimistic letter about the difficulties of the troupe. Five days this ordered a Chinese boatman to appear at 6 a. m. to carry the company to locations. On each occasion he turned up three hours later. Investigation finally disclosed that this was his regular rising time and nothing could persuade him to change his program.

Do you know that Lupe Velez got her first real break in pictures after Douglas Fairbanks saw her in a local musical show? She had failed twice before that to get screen work.

EAST LIBERTY HAILS RETURN OF ENRIGHT STAGE NUMBERS

By KATHERINE GODARD

East Liberty welcomes the return of stage shows at the Enright. They begin again this week with Buddy Page doing his stuff as master of ceremonies. The most attractive numbers on that part of the program were the three tap dancers, Queen, Queen and Queen, and Buddy's own piano solo. If I Had a Girl Like You." Other stage presentations were the acrobats, Christy and Nelson, and the colored baritone of jazz, George Dewey Washington, who gives a most syncopated interpretation of St. Louis Blues mixed up with a few other familiar airs.

The feature picture, "Recaptured Love," is a comedy in which a middle-aged man falls in and out of love with a peppy and bubbly young dancer. She bubbles with ecstatic enthusiasm, all caused by his convenient wealth, to such an extent that he immediately divorces his wife and marries her.

In due time he discovers that his increased age doesn't stand up under the strain of endless parties and blaring jazz, so he goes calling on his former wife. She proves to be a clever woman and before long the long-suffering man begins to lose sight of the charms of his flapperish wife. Belle Bennett plays the part of the first wife and is most convincing in her role of cleverness and insight.

Other features on the program are a Pathe comedy, "The New Waiter," a news reel, Cyril Guthoerl at the organ, and a Pathe review of beauties in Hollywood, entitled "Fairy Story."

Northwest

Helen Kane does her singing in the Canadian Northwest in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," new talkie in Aldine.

HELEN KANE AMAZIING AS "NAN MCGREW" IN ALDINE

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

James Oliver Curwood, Lewis Carroll and Mother Goose might well have collaborated in writing a manuscript for Helen Kane such as "Dangerous Nan McGrew," now playing at the Aldine. If any one of the above mentioned had turned out such a scenario he might suddenly have found himself in the throes of the hot seat, with a pistol [illegible] together with a couple to make [illegible] prohibitionists [illegible] Hall's acting and personality.

The lovesome Helen does manage to thrill you and her singing is amazing. That girl has appeal.

VICTOR MOORE IN IT

Victor Moore as Dan Foster [illegible] and Stuart Erwin as Jack Foster are Mary [illegible] Jean Harlow as Lil Lovejoy as the Kane.

Nan and Dan run a traveling medicine show in the Northwest. She and her partner are burdened unexpectedly and against their will with James Hall, playing Bob Dawes, a desperate murderer with a price on his head. She meets good old Buster, a nice simple little lad whose one ambition in life is to play the saxaphone and be the life of the party. Nan sings Buster while Dawes quarrels with Dan.

It has three good songs, a medicine show, a dangerous murderer, snow and log cabins a Mountie that gets his man, a costume ball and a Christmas party.

You'll like the song "I O U" and you'll enjoy shots of the Winter Carnival Dress Ball in Toronto.

An interesting Movietone short of the late Conan Doyle telling spiritualism to the photographers is an antidote to the feature flicker.

Sproul, Despite Bond, Plans Speaking Tour

John W. Sproul, "Glory Barn" evangelist at liberty under $5,000 bond, is not concerned about obtaining permission to leave the court's jurisdiction to conduct a contemplated preaching tour of West Virginia and Ohio towns, he revealed last night. He is reported to have said:

"I haven't seen any county authorities about leaving. My attorneys will attend to that."

Sproul, convicted recently on bad check charges, will close his tent meeting in Homestead tomorrow.

Girl Fractures Leg On Sliding Board

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

The Tragedy of Love

Spring is gone already—
And I must school my heart
To bear another Summer
With us—apart.

I must put by my dreaming,
And think of you no more,
Oh, I will be heart-weary
And lonely as the shore.

When all the gulls have left it,
And Summer sands are bright,
And the tides rejoin the ocean,
Day and night,

Will there ever be fulfillment
Of the barren sands and me?
Or must my heart grow bitter
And salty as the sea?

—Mimi Phillips.

Heheheh

From Sid Silvers who used to devise Phil Baker from a box seat comes this classic on the Yes-Man in Hollywood.

After a preview the magnate collected his crew of yessers about him.

"So what do you think?" he asked the first artist.

"Boss," was the reply, "it's stupendous!"

"And what do you think?" he asked the second.

"Terrific, superb, gigantic!" was the answer.

"And you?" he asked a frightened little fellow.

"Please, chief, don't be cross with me," was the reply, "but to me it is merely great!"

Squelch

One of those bores was stifling Don Marquis at a party the other night. Finally when the pest had finished an unsavory and pointless story, Marquis droned:

"No matter how often you change your mind, sir, it is never spotless."

Quietso, Quietso

One of the Broadway wives spoke a tongueful when his wife accused him of being unfaithful.

"My friends tell me," she wept, "that you've been seen with women."

"Listen, darling," he mercilessly-truth'd, "the time for you to worry is when they tell you they've seen me with the same woman twice."

Novelette

Even the good girls on Broadway are showered with gifts by newly-found admirers. Take the pretty Mildred Randall of the Club Abbey frinstance. Mildred, a Chicagorgeous thing, has been in New York for three months and wasn't very lucky with newspapermen. That is she would corner some of us and say:

"What must a girl do to get her name in the paper?"

She was told that the Big Idea was to keep her name out of the paper, but here it is and for a reason. She hopes a certain person will see it—a person who is old enough to be her grandpappy, but who only met her the other night, and on the next day sent her a check for $2,500, which she has cashed, and a diamond pendant watch valued at plenty.

Then when she telephoned his hotel to thank him, she was told he had taken the boat that morning to return to his home in India.

Wotta Man!

Oop!

I never dares to close my eyes,
For every time I do,
Things start to happen, and I see
Just you, and you and you!

I cannot bear to see the back
That you have turned my way,
But I have charted one grand kick
That will be yours some day!

—Elizabeth C. Lowrey.

Movie Shows Open In Parks Sunday

Arrangements to accommodate 100,000 persons each night have been made for the Sunday night movie shows which open in city parks tomorrow. Pictures listed for the first night are as follows: McKinley, "Father and Son;" Washington, "Old Arizona;" East, "Romance of the Rio Grande;" Schenley, "The Duke Steps Out;" Highland, "His First Command," and Arsenal, "Trailing Trouble."

Body of Drowning Victim Recovered

The body of Ray Hillman, 27, of 113 Fifth street, Aspinwall, was recovered from the Allegheny River at Blawnox last night, several hours after he was drowned, the coroner's office reported.

Hillman, visiting at Camp Sunny at Blawnox, apparently was seized with cramps. He was a machinist.

M'Keesport Farmer Ends Life by Poison

Frank Messenger, 70, a farmer, of Stewart's Hollow, Stewartsville road, near McKeesport, died early today in McKeesport Hospital of poison he is said to have taken at his home. He was despondent because of ill health, members of his family said.

You can find a summer home, for sale or rent, advertised in tomorrow's Classified Ads. Look for a place and secure it soon.

"THE BIG HOUSE" FAST SENSATIONAL FILM IN PENN

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

You'll see "The Big House" of course. Everybody who saw this stirring picture in the Penn yesterday will tell you not to miss it. A seemingly authentic portrait of prison life, a real dramatic novelty of the screen. It is credible because its most dramatic incidents, including a prison riot, are something the public has been made familiar with through actual happenings in penitentiaries.

While these things are powerful in their dramatic reactions, and the general effect is grim, startling realism, it is saved from being depressing by an interweaving of romance and comedy.

STORY EXCITING

Penal students will find in it a sermon pertaining to our method of handling convicts, overcrowding, poor food, and like problems, but the screen audience finds it a moving story with plenty of excitement, excellent characterization and wonderful illustration.

Wallace Beery has a role of one of those abysmal types, a congenial crook and killer, yet with a human streak that makes him square to his pals, a streak that appears as a redeeming flame. He is the leader of the revolt that forms the sensational climax when machine guns bark and tanks batter down a door to suppress unruly prisoners.

MORRIS GOOD BADMAN

Chester Morris gives another of those excellent good badman roles he does so well and, when he manages an escape, builds up the romantic angle. In this he wins the heart of the sister of a prisoner, Lelia Hyams doing nicely in this part. For his part in the prison riot he wins pardon. Robert Montgomery is the brother, whose weakness of character gets him off on the wrong foot when he enters prison to be cellmate of Beery and Morris. Karl Dane is in the picture merely as atmosphere, for comedy purposes only. Lewis Stone is a life portrait of a stern but fair prison warden.

On the stage, with Wesley Eddy farewelling, various specialties are presented, the stage band and setting carrying out the prison atmosphere. Henry Bergman and his black sheep do a bit of farce. Dorothy Moore sings, gives an imitation of Helen Kane and is wildly applauded. A clever contortionistic dancer, stepping by the Jordan Brothers, and Wesley Eddy's songs, including "Old Man River," and his organ specialty complete the bill, which is preceded by overture and organlogue.

Girls' Orchestra For Kennywood

Bobbie Grice and her 14 Bricktops, the finest girls' band in the world, will be an extra attraction in Kennywood Monday night only, playing in the dance pavilion in conjunction with Danny Nirella's Kennywoodians. The latter is heard daily except Sunday. Tomorrow a special feature will be the Jayne Jarrell Musical Revue, scheduled for four performances. The Sensational Jacks in aerial acrobatics and Kenneth Ross, clown, will be other daily attractions in the park.

Water Fete Toay At Edgewater Pool

A huge water gala and beauty pageant will be held tomorrow at the Rock Bottom pool, Edgewood, under the auspices of the Willows pool swimming team. Comedy acts, 60-foot dives, races and a beauty parade feature the program, arranged by Ben Bright and J. W. Hobart.

The officials include Buck McTiernan, Dave Broudy, John Jay Burke, Alex Hill, George Lee, Don Thomas, A. R. McCall, Harry I. Neaman, Margaret Wolff and W. W. McCafferty.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Why are you glad you live in Mt. Lebanon?

James E. Wood

JAMES E. WOOD, chief of police, Mt. Lebanon: It's the nicest spot anyone could pick for a home. I've been all over the country and haven't found any place as nice.

C. Burkel

C. BURKEL, manager golf course, Mt. Lebanon: Well, I've lived here for 22 years and I still think there isn't a place to live that's a bit better than Mt. Lebanon.

Dolton Courtney

DOLTON COURTNEY, Mt. Lebanon: I like to watch the men working on their cars and see them in the garages. Mt. Lebanon has other nice places to play, too, and smooth hills where you can coast in your wagon.

Mrs. Giles

MRS. L. H. GILES, housewife, Mt. Lebanon: I like Mt. Lebanon. It's a beautiful place and is open and roomy. The air is nice and it doesn't get all the dirt of the city.

Mrs. Baklaic

MRS. M. P. BAKLAIC, housewife, Mt. Lebanon: It's the nicest residential section around here, is beautifully built up, and has all the advantages anyone could want in a town in which to live.

Mrs. Galoup

MRS. F. H. GALOUP, housewife, Mt. Lebanon: I chose this place to live on account of the children. It's so open and the yards around the houses are so convenient. The babies can play in their own yard and still have plenty of room and not bother anyone else around.

THE OFFICE WIFE

By FAITH BALDWIN

Anne Tells Ted That She Cannot Marry Him

CHAPTER XXXII.

They drove in absolute silence through the stupendous massed traffic of a hot summer night. When they reached Manhattan Beach the wind was cool and salt and the rows of bungalows blazed with light, resounded with voices and laughter, the music of phonographs and radios. At the end of each street the ocean rolled in, calm, dark, mysterious, with the promise of light that the rising moon held out to it.

The bungalow Ted shared with his friends was brilliantly lighted and a phonograph was playing on the porch.

Anne parked the car and her mother, speaking for the first time, said: "I'll wait here," and settled back to watch the ocean and the rising moon.

Anne went in. Half a dozen young men and women, all of whom she knew, looked up at her entrance. They were bathing suits and had been dancing.

Harry Peters, Ted's closest friend, came forward. "Anne! What a piece of luck! Did you bring your suit?"

"No, I'm not going to stay." She greeted the other, smiling. "Mother's out in the car. We went for a ride," she improvised, "and I want to speak to Ted."

"He's down on the beach," Peters told her hastily. "I'll go get him."

"No, I'll go."

"Please." Peters pleasant face was troubled. "You'll get your shoes full of sand. I'll call him."

But she had run out, saying over her shoulder: "Thanks, Harry; don't bother."

A Surprise

There was a silence after she had left until one of the girls remarked, resignedly, "Well, that tears it, probably."

Peters said: "Oh, I don't know. Anne's sensible. Still, Jane, you shouldn't have brought her down."

"Why not?" She begged to come. It isn't my fault that Ted gave her one sort of rush last year and the hum's rush this," answered Jane coolly. "I should worry!"

Anne went down to the private beach adjoining the bungalow. She called Ted once, and as she called she saw a dark blur near a pile of driftwood.

She walked over, thinking he had not heard her. The wind was blowing hard and in the wrong direction.

She stumbled upon them—Ted with a girl in his arms. Ted saying over and over: "I'm sorry. I'm sorry. I didn't know."

Anne stopped stock-still. She wanted to die of shame at her involuntary eavesdropping. But she couldn't move.

She heard the girl's voice answer, a voice familiar to her: "You did know. I've loved you all along. You cared once, a little—or said you did. I can't give you up, Teddy. I won't."

Anne said quietly, walking nearer: "You won't have to, Polly."

Polly Ames pulled herself out of Ted's arms with a little shriek.

"Anne!" Ted exclaimed.

Accused by Polly

Ted moved forward, angry and at the same time abject. The moon, sailing out from under a cloud, flung a silver arrow on the scene; the driftwood pile, the two girls and the man, the white, shifting sand.

"It doesn't matter. I came here to see you," Anne began.

"I can explain," Ted said unhappily.

on, "but that doesn't matter, either. You don't have to. I came down to break our engagement. I hadn't intended to do it before an audience," Anne went on, "bue that doesn't matter, either. I don't love you. I've told you so. I told you I thought I'd care—some day. I've found that I can't. This"—she indicated Polly by the merest gesture of her hand—"this accident has nothing to do with my decision. I came on purpose to tell you that I was sorry, that you must let me go."

Before Ted could answer, Polly Ames spoke, anger drying the tears in her eyes, anger lending force to her words.

"You're a selfish woman, Anne Murdock," she accused. "You used Ted as long as it suited you, and now you throw him over because you no longer need him. What's the answer? Did Mr. Eaton give you your job back?" she asked. "There isn't any one who doesn't know that you're crazy in love with him, that you just took Ted because you hadn't a chance—"

"Keep quiet," Ted ordered, turning on the other girl savagely. "All this is none of your business."

Polly Scornful

"It is my business! I'll make it so!" cried Polly furiously. "Listen to me, Anne. All the time Ted was going with you at first, he was going with me, too. Oh, I know I had your leavings, but I didn't care. I was in love with him, really in love. I thought he'd come to see it to see how little he meant to you, how much he meant to me.

"I wanted him. I tell you. Not as a convenience, but as my own. I wanted a home and babies. I wanted Ted—and because I did, I let him make love to me. I let him kiss me with you in his mind. I thought perhaps some day he'd forget you and turn to me.

"Well, when you lost your job and saw that your boss had no further use for you, you gave Ted his chance. Some chance! A fine life he would have led with you always comparing him with another man. Don't I know what a life it would have been? Hasn't he played the same game with me?

"You make me sick, you business women, competing with men, thinking yourselves as superior always aiming to get the man higher up not giving a snap of your fingers for the man who hasn't got there yet! You wouldn't be willing to work for a man. You'd always be throwing up to him how important you were to your job.

"Work!" said Polly scornfully. "What does that amount to—to a real woman? It's just marking time until a man comes along who'll work for you, who will make a home for you, a man who'll come to you, not for business conversation, but for love, for comfort, for babies. A man who'll be head of the house, not just tolerated in it."

Anne Admits Truth

She fell on the sand, a soft heap of curls and rage, and, with her face on her arms began to cry.

"She's right," Anne said, her voice shaking. "She speaks for her type, I guess, and puts mine in its place. I'm sorry this had to happen," she told O'Hara. "But please believe me, it isn't because I saw Polly with you that I told you I'd quit. I'd made up my mind to it before I came down. She hasn't made any difference, except that she makes me see myself more clearly."

O'Hara looked down at Polly and then across at Anne. He said, with utter wretchedness: "I've known for a long time how you felt about me. But I cared for you so much—Anne, it's you I love!—that I was willing to take the chance."

"I'm not willing to take it for you," she told him. "Good-by."

She turned and walked away. Ted, walking over to the pile of driftwood, cursed aloud and kicked at the logs with his sandaled feet.

She'd found him in a ridiculous position. She'd let him down before another woman. Not that that was her fault, however, he was forced to reflect. A woman who loved him. Well, she'd heard that much—that some one cared for him. That was a sort of stinging salve to his pride.

Polly—it hadn't been her fault, either. It had been his from the beginning. But a man couldn't be blamed for going where he knew he was wanted. Of course, Polly had made a mess of this and he'd never get over Anne, but still Polly loved him and she hadn't been responsible. He had taken her in his arms and kissed her after she'd asked him when he was to be married and had started to cry when he told her.

SOME AMBITIOUS children feel that their future is greatly handicapped, because they were born to poor parents.

This is their first serious mistake which will hinder their progress.

From just such parents are inherited the indomitable spark which has carried so many so far beyond the limitations of this first environment.

Good plain parents endow their children with health, energy and ambition!

Without these no real progress is possible, no matter how rich and influential one's family.

It is not birth, but being, that counts.

Improvement is an individual effort, within the reach of all.

Cultivate your mind, your taste and your charm, and you will attain much.

And the first step is to appreciate those who gave you life, by being considerate and not critical!

Dicky Locks Revolver in Desk Drawer

I am sure that if Junior by some legerdemain had procured his father's revolver and pointed it at us, Dickey and I would not have been more surprised than we were by our young son's calm announcement that his father would shoot any marauder with his revolver. We had been so certain that the boy had never known of the existence of the weapon that the mere possibility of his having seen its hiding place but a minute or two before had sent us both into a panic. And now he was mentioning the gun with the casual air with which he would have spoken of a tennis racquet or a golf club.

Either I was the first to recover, or Dicky purposely left the questioning to me. At any rate I found myself saying tremulously:

"A revolver, Junior! You never saw dad with a revolver, did you?"

"No, I never did," our small son returned. "But he must have one, mustn't he? He was a brave flier in the war. He was an ace. You always told me that, Mums, didn't you?"

"Of course, dear." I reassured the mounting panic in his tone, while Dicky made the deprecatory little grunts of a modest man who fears himself praised. "I told you the truth. But—"

"But don't brave aces always have revolvers?" There was so much disappointment in the boy's tone that I gave him a quick affirmative. Plainly he had been boasting to Roderick of his father's fame.

"Yes, Junior, of course he always had a revolver in war time."

"But what did he do with it?" The boyish voice was sharp with fear. "He didn't give it away, did he? When you showed me his silver wings you said they'd be mine some day. But I'd want his revolver, too. Hasn't he got it?"

I waved a helpless hand toward Dicky, for I was not equal to Junior's third degree any longer.

"Yes, son, I have it carefully put away for you," Dicky said gravely.

"Is it in this room?" I remembered what Dicky has frequently said of his son's "one-track mind," and hurtled to the issue.

"I do not think you ought to ask your father where he keeps his revolver, Junior," I said gravely. "He has told you that he is keeping it safe for you, and that is all you need to know. When you are old enough, he will show it to you, and perhaps teach you how to shoot with it. So do not talk about it again. Now I will tell you what the noise was downstairs. I went down to the billiard room and Katie heard me moving around down there. You know how excited she gets over little things."

Junior nodded and turned to Roderick.

"She's the biggest fraid cat about some things and other things she isn't scared of at all," he explained largely.

"So," I went on, as he turned back to me, "she thought there was a burglar in the basement and started to scream at the top of her voice. Of course, everybody heard her and they all ran down. But by that time I had called to Katie and she saw everything was all right."

"Did Dad take his revolver when he ran down?" Junior asked.

The question made me hesitate. Was it possible that the boy knew his father had taken the weapon with him, and with the cunning of childhood was testing our truthfulness. But my voice was firm as I answered him.

"Did I tell you a minute ago that you were not to ask your father any questions about his revolver? Please do not forget again."

"I won't," Junior returned. "But——"

"Not another word of questions," I told him, but with a smile at the two faces upturned to mine. "You're going to be late for breakfast as it is. Run along now and show Aunt Katherine how quickly you can get dressed."

"All right," he replied obediently. "Come on, Rod," and the two trotted out.

Dicky made two strides to the door, locked it and sank down in the nearest chair.

"I don't mind telling you I'm all in," he said. "And the worst

Household Hints

If you have a door that continually blows shut and needs something to hold it open in the summer breezes, don't resort to a chair, a pile of books, etc. There are delightful door stops in the shape of odd animals, baskets of flowers and figures of art that can be bought at moderate prices that add greatly to the appearance of the room, instead of giving it an upset appearance.

Dish covers should be warmed as well as the dishes if you want the dinner to be served hot.

Don't be afraid to wash real tapestry. A good one will always launder.

Use a piece of candle instead of the cork in the glue bottle and you will find the glue will not dry out.

Handing It to Them

There are dark moments, when every married woman secretly wonders why there aren't sanitariums for the headstrong as well as for the feebleminded.

* * *

There is as much difference between real love and the canned ready-to-serve variety as popular, today, as there is between Southern cooking and the "chicken Maryland" you get in a tea-room.

A wife should be an inspiration, a partner and a soul-mate. But, falling short of that, almost any fairly good wife is a "rest cure" after a few years of petting, night-clubbing, bachelor-flatting and primrose-waying.

* * *

He doesn't know it, but one thing the modern man misses, in spite of all the so-called feminine styles, is the "rustle" of the taffeta petticoat, which was considered so seductive in the Gay Nineties.

* * *

It takes a strong love to survive the close communion of a two-by-four apartment and the hit-or-miss menu of a dinette diet.

This is the time of year when it's pretty hard for the office optimist to sit at his desk, and think how much hotter he might be lying out in the sun, worrying because the fish wouldn't bite.

A strong wind will put out a little fire but only blow up the blaze of a big fire, and a short parting will cure a little love, but only fan the flame of a great love.

When a man boasts that he's a "philosopher," somehow, everybody wonders what his wife has done to drive him to it.

Just about now, the early June bridegroom is beginning to discover that telephoning the little wife every day, takes up a lot of time—and that what he has to say CAN keep until after dinner.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Should a Man Invest in Marriage Security?

Hurley, aged 26, is about to invest in a marriage. But being a cautious guy, he's "going a little investigating first"—with various results, not all favorable.

"How long should a marriage last?" asked Hurley of a married lady friend, wondering whether he was going to get 8 per cent or just 4 per cent on his venture.

"Well," said the lady, looking wise and smiling strangely, "a real good marriage should last a long, long time. At least through two permanent waves."

Whereat Hurley retreated in horror and dismay. And now he's thinking that maybe he had better invest in a few good government bonds instead of a wife.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I am a young man of 26. I have a good position, a nice sum in the bank, fine prospects, and I think the time has come when I should contemplate marriage. I am not, however, of a rash, impulsive nature, like most modern young men. I do not think that the mere fact that I am strongly attracted to a certain girl should make me put my whole future in jeopardy. So I am doing a little investigating first.

"First, I asked a lady acquaintance who is married, just how long a marriage should last. She replied that if it were a good, substantial one, it should last a long time . . . , at least through two permanent waves. Not being acquainted with permanent waves, I sought another married friend to find out just how long that would be.

"'Marie,' I said, 'how long does a permanent wave last?'

"'Well' she said, pausing for thought, 'I usually make one last through two weddings.'

SLOW TO DECIDE

"Of course they were razzing me and I know it. But joking aside—I wish you would give me your opinion. Have you ever thought how hard it is for a man to make up his mind to marry these days? On every side he sees marriages that have gone on the rocks. And even if a marriage doesn't result in divorce there's the nagging and worry and expense. Even the rosiest romance seems to become a deadly endurance test within a year or two. Is a man wise to exchange the comfort and pleasure of bachelor life for the uncertainty of such an alliance? What can marriage give to compensate for all it takes away?

"Hurley."

To take a chance or not to take a chance?

That's your real dilemma, isn't it, Hurley?

You want Life . . . but you want it with no risk to yourself. You want to be positive that this marriage you're contemplating is going to turn out in your favor before you go in for it. You want to be certain that you aren't going to be hurt or disappointed or embarrassed, before you commit yourself.

You'll only bet on a Sure Thing.

NOTHING SURE IN LIFE

Well, nothing in life is a sure thing, son. Marriage, business, even play—all have their elements of chance. They may turn out successfully. But they may turn also, without warning, leave us sunk. But what of it?

Life's worth the risk! And the best thing in life, to any man who's worthy of the name, is its risk.

The man who never dares, and never loses, has no doubt—a certain feeling of comfort and complacency. As he looks at the difficulties and failures of others, he can congratulate himself that he has "stayed out of it all." But he can never know the high points of achievement. He can never thrill with pride because he had the courage to risk and dare—to experiment and adventure. And he can never know the bliss and beauty and power and peace that comes from living life fully—that comes, above all, from daring to love.

For love is the greatest adventure on earth, Hurley. And marriage is its greatest civilized expression. Whether it turns out well or not, it is still worth while.

And I truly believe that even an unhappy marriage is better than no marriage at all. For I believe that we "grow up" more in marriage than under any other condition. And the great aim of life isn't just to be comfortable or safe or happy. It's to grow up—to become full sized men and women.

But that's just my individual idea, Hurley—and thousands may disagree. So here's your chance, stranger. Tell Hurley your hunch on marriage. If you were a carefree bachelor again—would you or wouldn't you take the risk?

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Gracious Wedding Guest

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—When attending a church wedding in the evening, with reception afterwards, is it necessary to wear formal clothes? If so, should a gentleman wear a Tuxedo or "swallowtail" suit?

2—If the wedding is in a church, is it necessary for the lady to wear a hat?

3—When attending a reception after the wedding, can one leave without bidding the hostess goodbye, and how long should one stay at the reception?

4—Is it proper to send two cards, one of the husband's and one of the wife's, with a wedding gift, or should the card read "Mr. and Mrs."?

O. M.

1. Yes, formal clothes should be worn. The gentlemen should wear "tail-coats" not dinner jackets.

2—Usually she does not wear a hat. But this depends on the regulations of the church in which the ceremony is to be held. This is easy for her to find out either from the bride or from the church itself.

3—Stay as long at the reception as you wish or as you find it convenient. And before you go to get your wraps, be sure to go to the hostess, tell what a charming time you have had and bid her goodby.

4—Either form is correct.

Simplifying the Introduction

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Will you kindly tell me which is the proper thing to do? When a young man friend introduces you to a couple of boy friends, and you go to introduce them to some girl friends, would it be proper to introduce your boy friend, and let him introduce his friends, or should I introduce them all to the girl friends?

2—I was asked by a young man to go to a dance, and was unable to go with him and had to refuse. Now I am invited to a party and have to take an escort. Would it be proper for me to ask this young man to go? I have never been in his company before, but have known him a long time.

E. M. N.

1. Either form is correct. But as a matter of fact, since it is not always easy to "catch" names at this kind of introduction, it probably is better to indicate that you would like to have the young man do the introducing.

2—Yes, this would be correct, especially since the young man has already invited you to go to a party with him.

Attire for the Five-Thirty Church Wedding

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Kindly tell me the correct way of dressing for a 5:30 church wedding, with reception to follow?

2. What does R. S. V. P. on the reception invitation stand for?

E. P.

1. In formal day clothes.

2. These initials stand for the French words repondez, s'il vous plait—please answer, please reply, literally respond, if you please.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Hay Fever Lessened by Careful Diet and Rest

Warnings against hay fever are out. Every year we hear a great deal about the sufferings of humanity from this disease.

DR. COPELAND

However, there is a bright side to the picture.

For example, the clinics in the 38 hospitals and other institutions in New York City are co-operating with the medical profession and public in giving to sufferers of hay fever inoculations by serums. The list of clinics has been announced in the newspapers and thousands will take advantage of this preventive treatment.

Hay fever is a catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membrane of the eyes, nose and throat. The exciting cause is the irritation of the pollen from plants and vegetables of various types.

Serums which are prepared from the various pollens are now being used in treating hay fever, with very good results in many cases. These inoculations by serum build up resistance to infection, or at least lessen the violence of the disease.

Early in the spring the first type of hay fever puts in an appearance. Then the trees are developing and pollen is carried by the wind in every direction. There appears to be no freedom from this time to the period of autumn frosts.

Fortunate is the victim of this ailment who can get away to the mountains. Another method of escape is an ocean voyage, away from the vegetation that excited it.

When hay fever starts the mucous membrane of the nose swells. There is a steady discharge from the eyes, nose and throat. Breathing is apt to be difficult and the patient is generally miserable.

There is failure of appetite. The infection creeps down through the bronchial tubes and may even extend to the stomach and intestines. The rest is broken and the patient may have to sleep in a sitting position. It's a pretty bad state of affairs, and the patient is apt to be worn out before cold weather sets in.

"Autumn catarrh" is a good name for this ailment. It is in the autumn that the pollen from golden rod and the meadow grasses is most abundant.

Every sufferer of hay fever should be very careful of his diet.

He should have plenty of sleep. It is a good thing to use an atomizer with an antiseptic solution, spraying the nose and throat every hour or two. The use of the atomizer should be begun early and continue as long as the disease lasts.

A trip to the mountains or some other high altitude will insure your suffering the minimum amount. You will find many friends in like straits doing this very same thing.

Get away from the dust of the roads and streets, the disability which arises from work and worry, intense heat and moisture. All these things are factors in this distressing malady. The flowers of summer and late fall, the odor of new-mown hay, the grasses, weeds and field vegetation may be equally guilty.

Horoscopes

Sunday, July 13

Sunday's horoscope holds augury of an unexpected change, with probable travel, removal or change of environment, but with only fair promise of advantage or satisfaction. There may be some disappointments and the finances are not well fortified. Loans, litigation and the extravagant use of funds should be avoided.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of unexpected change, with probable removal, journeys or new ventures. There may be minor setbacks or anxieties and it would be well not to put funds in jeopardy through loans.

A child born on this day may be ingenious, original and lean toward the occult, metaphysical or scientific research.

Monday, July 14

Monday's forecast is a rather perplexing and contradictory one, judging by the conflicting astral mutations. Although the financial situation seems strong and there is good encouragement for increase, expansion and fulfilled ambitions, yet there are many hazards and complications, with the personal tendency to strife, tempestuous and impulsive conduct contributing to the adverse circumstances.

Those whose birthday it is are warned of a year of agitation and unhappy and unfortunate conditions unless they determine to meet hostile conditions and adversities with calmness, self-control and wise judgment.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, aggressive and ambitious.

BUILDING UNITS BY BLAW-KNOX ALL STEEL

Fire Safeness, Flexibility, Low Maintenance Costs Result From Firm's Plan

STEEL MAKES FOR SAFETY

The Blaw-Knox Company, of Pittsburgh, for [illegible] and works of C. D. Pe[illegible] Baltimore, produces [illegible] the Blaw-Knox line of all-steel, [illegible] buildings.

By the application of good engineering principles the Blaw-Knox line has developed until it now is a standard, sturdy building constructed on a plan of standardized, stock units.

Blaw-Knox buildings have the flexibility of sectional construction while retaining all features of permanence usually associated with a masonry type of construction. Being made entirely from steel these buildings are fireproof and are also insulated to conform to fire regulations. Galvanized copper bearing steel sheets

WOOD ROOF HAZARDOUS

The most hazardous element in a building from a viewpoint of loss by fire is a wood roof. The combustible trusses and other structural members that support the wall below [illegible] of a building has a wood roof there is always the danger of the entirely and complete destruction of the plant and equipment by fire. A steel roof resists all fire from within which most of the danger lies. A steel roof also confines fire within and prevents it from spreading to other buildings within the plant.

STEEL EXPORTS DECLINE

WASHINGTON, July 12. The United States export trade in iron and steel products for the second consecutive month declined sharply, bringing the total shipments for May down to the low figure of 196,120 gross tons. Imports remained virtually stationary at 52,297.

The export trade was 17,520 tons less than that of April, which had in turn been 29,693 tons less than that of March, the best May figure of 196,120 tons being the lowest recorded for any month since February, 1928, when shipments to foreign buyers had totaled 185,915 tons. The import trade was only 353 tons less than in April and was the lowest figure since February of this year.

STEEL OUTPUT HAS PROBABLY HIT BOTTOM

Consuming Lines Have Now Had Their Full Decreases; Aug. 1 Usual Turning Point

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Steel production in the Pittsburgh district this week has been at about 60 per cent of capacity and that is approximately the rate for the entire industry. Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Company has its open-hearth plant entirely down for installation of a new blooming mill and one of its blast furnaces is banked in this connection, the other being in blast.

While some observers are doubtful whether the recession in the rate of steel production has now ended the probabilities are that it has. In the first place the consuming lines that were marked for decreases have had their full decreases to this time. Automobile production this month is very low and the effect of that was felt late in June. A similar case is presented by the agricultural industry, which regularly ends one season July 1 becoming active some weeks later on the following season. Rail production is very light. No freight car orders are in sight but the shops have already reached a relatively low rate.

PIPE OUTPUT UP

Structural fabricating fully maintains its pace, while production of line pipe has been increasing. In the second place it has been the invariable thing in an ordinary year, with natural seasonal fluctuation, for steel production to begin increasing about August 1.

The Steel Corporation's unfilled tonnage statement for June was rather favorable, all things considered. The 91,163 tons decrease compares with much larger decreases in the four years 1925 to 1926 inclusive but business methods were different then. Last year there was a June increase of 220,187 tons, but conditions were exceptional. It is no particular point to note that the June decrease was so much less than the May decrease of 294,993 tons or the April decrease of 216,433 tons. All three decreases were due in large part to rail shipments against annual orders, with no fresh buying, and by June 1 rail production had begun decreasing. It is now very light, Alabama mills being down while Chicago district mills are reported at not over 25 per cent. As to the next unfilled tonnage report, in two of the last four years there was a July decrease also in all of the three years preceding.

AUTO PRODUCTION DOWN

Automobile productions in June cars and trucks, United States and Canada is unofficially reported at 343,000. There have been large decreases from last year. This month will show a particularly large loss. To June 1 the year was simply rather poor, while now it is growing poorer.

One of the difficulties in an attempt to forecast steel tonnage in the remainder of the year is a suspicion entertained in some quarters that perhaps in the last six months steel has been doing better than should be expected from the state of general trade.

Fights Rates

DONALD O. MOORE
Mr. Moore, traffic manager for the Chamber of Commerce, who has organized shippers for their protest against increased short haul freight rates.

RATE HEARINGS ADJOURNED

Shippers and consumers of steel continued to add to the mass of evidence of the penalty placed upon the Pittsburgh district by increased freight rates on short hauls of steel at the hearing before the Public Service Commission yesterday.

More than 20 traffic managers of leading industrial organizations testified as to their annual shipments and the increase in the operating costs resulting from the new rates, many of which have been doubled.

MOVE QUESTIONED

Attorneys for the railroads and shippers clashed over the admission of testimony by Donald O. Moore, traffic manager for the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, at the opening of yesterday's hearing. Counsel for the railroads questioned Moore's right to represent the opinion of the chamber and demanded information on the vote taken on the rate question, stating that the railroad members had opposed participation of the chamber in the case. Moore stated that his action had been approved by a majority of the board of directors.

Hearings were adjourned late yesterday until a date to be fixed by the commission. Commissioner Charles H. Young said the final hearing would probably be in Harrisburg.

SWITCHING RATES

Counsel for the railroads, led by Guernsey Orcutt, assistant general counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad, failed in their attempt to secure a definite 60-day adjournment on the grounds that they did not know that switching zone rates were to be under discussion. They stated that they needed the additional time to prepare testimony.

W. W. Collin, Jr., and associate counsel for the complaining shippers protested on the ground that freight bills under the new rates were accumulating. Collin said that his complaints gave ample notice and that the newspapers had fully broadcast the claims of the shippers.

Big Oil Companies Work to Fix Gas Price

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Several of the major oil companies are preparing to inaugurate a new marketing system to protect service stations against competition forcing sale of gasoline at no profit. At this time, under the new plan, dealers would not purchase gasoline from refining companies but would receive it on consignment, market it at a price to be authorized by the oil companies and obtaining in return a commission of 4c a gallon regardless of retail price charged.

Dealers are being canvassed on the proposition and it is likely that one of the large companies will be able to put the plan into effect by the first of next week. Contracts will be signed binding dealers to sell at prices authorized by major oil companies, and eliminating the price-cutting practices.

RETAIL SALES IN SUMMER SLUMP

Dun's Review Reports Poor Business in Hardware, Plumbing Supplies, Glass

Retail sales are showing the usual seasonal decline, with department store sales holding up fairly well in comparison with the same period of a year ago, according to R. G. Dun & Co. Jobbers of wearing apparel, drygoods and shoes report buying comparatively light, with orders almost entirely for filling-in purposes.

STRAW HAT SALES DROP

Sales of men's straw hats, which were quite active for a time, have fallen off very materially. Hardware sales are comparatively light although demand for sporting goods and camping supplies is quite active. The sale of automobiles is below normal for this period of the year, while accessories are reporting moving in fair volume. Construction work continues below normal, with residential construction particularly light and the movement of lumber and other building materials continues slow. Little change is noted in the sale of groceries and provisions, with the movement of confectionery considerably below normal.

PLATE GLASS DECLINES

Industrial operations are at a lower rate, with steel mills averaging less than 60 per cent, and some plants are operating at a considerably lower rate than as usual at this period of the year. Demand for plumbing and heating supplies, lighting fixtures, etc., has shown no material improvement, and business in those lines is averaging considerably lower than a year ago. Production of plate glass has declined to some extent as is customary during hot weather, and demand continues quiet. Window glass continues to move rather slowly, but with improvement anticipated in the near future.

Crude oil production has shown a slight reduction, and Pennsylvania Crude oil is being reduced in output, in an effort to bring the total production to about half what it was a year ago. Efforts are also being made to reduce the amount of gasoline produced in order to take care of the surplus which refiners appear to have on hand. Bituminous coal situation shows no improvement, with production at a low rate, and demands very quiet. Western Pennsylvania grades run of mine-coal are quoted per net ton at mines as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; steam slack, 90c to $1.10, and gas slack, $1.00 to $1.25.

Big Austrian Loan Issued Next Week

LONDON, July 12.—The Austrian government loan, amounting to $60,000,000, will be issued in participating markets on July 16. Contracts will be signed in London, July 14. The amount allotted to New York is $25,000,000; that to London, £3,000,000, while the balance will be issued in Sweden, Holland, Austria, Italy and Switzerland. Paris will not participate. Terms of the loan will be announced on Monday.

Castle Shannon Bond Issue Sold

The Mellon National Bank was the successful bidder for an issue of $40,000 par value Borough of Castle Shannon, Pa., 4½ per cent bonds, due March 1, 1935, to 1950. The bonds are being offered at prices to yield 4.10 per cent.

WOMAN SELLS TO CHURCHES

When Miss Ella J. Letzkus lost two good jobs through bankruptcy failures she decided it was high time something was done, so she went into business for herself—and made it a success. That was 18 years ago, and the business she selected was unusual for a woman—selling church supplies.

The Letzkus Church Supply House is in Jenkins Arcade, its original location. From a small shop the institution has grown so that several large supply rooms are needed now to take care of stock, in addition to the large display room on the second floor.

Miss Letzkus supplies vestries, books, statuary, beads, prayer-books and Bibles, pictures and dozens of other commodities to Catholic churches in the Pittsburgh district principally, and even in distant part of the United States or foreign countries occasionally.

She is one of Pittsburgh's pioneer business women, considering that she took the plunge into the sea of commerce almost a score of years ago when a business woman was looked upon as exceptionally daring to take the risk of failure.

Miss Letzkus was born in Troy Hill, and still lives in the North Side district.

Fewer Cars Needed For Lakes Traffic

TOLEDO, O., July 12.—The commodity committee of Great Lakes Region Advisory Board estimates that 723,636 freight cars will be needed in the region during the third quarter, a decrease of 13.7 per cent from the actual loadings of 837,752 cars in the like period last year.

Packing Company In New Financing

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—California Packing Company will soon engage in public financing in the form of 10-year 5 per cent debentures, convertible into common stock at about $75 a share. Amount of the issue will approximate $15,000,000 and proceeds will furnish additional working capital.

Bank Groups to Expand This Year

Further expansion in the two leading groups of banks in Western Pennsylvania is expected to take place before the end of the summer. Both the Mellons and J. H. Hillman, Jr., are known to be carrying on negotiations which may lead to the acquisition of controlling interests in additional outlying banks, according to reports in financial circles.

TRADE FIGURES UP, DOWN

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Business for the week ended July 5 as measured by the volume of checks presented for payment, was 18 per cent greater than the preceding week but was lower than the corresponding period in 1929.

Wholesale prices, as a whole remained at the same level as a week ago, but showed a decrease of 13 per cent when compared with the week ended July 6, 1929. The average price of wheat at Kansas City declined slightly from the preceding week and was lower than last year. Iron and steel prices, as measured by the composite index, although showing no change from the week ended June 28, were 9 per cent lower than the same period in 1929.

Bank loans and discounts showed a slight decline from last week, but were greater than the corresponding week in 1929. Average prices for stocks showed a gain of 3 per cent over the preceding week, but were lower when compared with the same period a year ago. Representative bond prices registered gains over both prior periods. Interest rates for call money were slightly higher than the preceding period, but showed a marked decline from a year ago. Interest rates for time money showed declines from both comparitive periods. Business failures were reported to be fewer than during a week ago.

The activity of steel mills at the end of the week of June 28 showed a slight decline from the week of June 21 and was well below the level of a year ago. The volume of building, as measured by the number of contracts awarded, during the week ended June 28 showed considerable gains over both prior periods.

Check payments, bank loans and discounts, and stock prices for the week ended July 5, 1930, registered increases when compared with the week ended July 7, 1928.

Retail Inventories Off, Says Broker

Department store sales for June were reported to have been 9 per cent below last year, while sales for the six-month period declined 4 per cent. It is noteworthy that the decrease in sales by department and chain stores has been substantially less than the decline in production activity, indicating reduction of inventories, according to a statement by Hill, Wright & Frew.

JUNE BUILDING SHOWS GAIN OVER MAY

Prospects for Construction In Rest of Year Bright, A. G. C. Charts Indicate

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—An increase of approximately 8½ per cent in the volume of construction performed during June as compared with that of the previous month, was indicated by the shipments of basic construction materials, according to the statistical charts of the Associated General Contractors of America, which show the June volume at index number 191, or 15 points above that for May. The June index number, however, was 40 points below that for the same month last year.

Composite index numbers for the first six months of 1930 indicate a decrease of 12 per cent in the amount of construction work performed during the first half of the year as compared with the same period of 1929. The average monthly index this year has been 148 against 167 for the first six months of last year and 136 for the entire 12-month period of 1929.

Although contract awards reported for the first five months likewise show a decrease in comparison with those of last year, Edward J. Harding, assistant general manager of the Associated General Contractors, is confident that there is still a large volume of work which will come forward and that a relatively stronger showing will be made in the final half of the year.

MORE CONCRETE PAVEMENTS

Concrete surface pavement awards aggregated 18,514,000 square yards in May, or 314,000 square yards more than in the previous month, which was a record-breaking April. The awards for the first five months totaled 64,665,936 square yards, or an increase of 13.3 per cent over the same period last year.

Long-term state and municipal bond issues totaled $135,000,000 in May and $595,056,000 for the first five months, a gain of slightly more than 12 per cent for the latter period. The monthly average thus far has been $119,000,000 as compared with $107,150,000 for the first five months of 1929.

The average of construction costs in the principal construction centers in June was 3.4 points less than cost index figure for the same month a year ago, standing at index number 199.6, according to the association's charts.

Facts Showing Some Concerns Are Doing Well

—By B. C. FORBES—

FACTS AND FIGURES showing the [illegible] business [illegible] are [illegible]

John H. Perry, [illegible] of the Associated Press Association, [illegible] of newspaper [illegible]

Our Reading, Pa., paper is 50,000 lines of advertising ahead of last year. In Jacksonville, Fla., we are 75,000 lines ahead of last year. My New York companies, including the American Press Association and others, are all from 5 to 20 per cent ahead of last year.

PRESIDENT [illegible] McCAULEY of Packard [illegible] writes:

"We are not in the least disturbed over the outlook. The immediate future doesn't look so good for earnings, but in the long run people can less than ever do without automobiles. The ones they have are wearing out and at times change there will be a dammed up condition of demand that I believe will mean a fine future business.

"As a matter of fact the Packard company isn't doing so badly. We made over a million dollars in May. That was before the price cut to be sure. Since the price cut our business has exceeded in numbers our sales and deliveries in the corresponding time last year—the biggest in our history. In a merchandising way I am a great believer in moving stocks. I don't believe in carrying goods on the shelves if they can be sold without a loss. And our distributing organization which, after all is the most important element in any motor car company, is very grateful for the move we made. Most of our distributors and dealers are in black ink."

PRESIDENT GEORGE B. EVERITT of Montgomery Ward and Company writes:

"I have read with great interest your column which contained the paragraph 'let industry let business, let finance, declare a declaration of independence against gloom and this will do at least something toward a declaration of independence against unemployment.'

"What you are thinking and what you are writing is so much in accordance with our own current efforts that you may wish to supplement your column with some reference to what we are doing."

Mr. Everitt encloses a full-page newspaper advertisement his company has been running this week in 65 papers all over the country which he adds "will be supplemented to a substantial degree in the 900 newspapers that our retail stores use." One feature of the Montgomery Ward announcement: In addition to the statement that "prices are down now to the new commodity levels" is the offering of a time payment plan between now and September 15 for all bills of goods (except groceries) totaling $25 or more. Mr. Everitt figures that in addition to the extra business attracted by this company's cheerful slogan, advertising will actually have some bearing on consumer thought and action.

President Eugene G. Grace of Bethlehem Steel remarked to me:

"We are in no sense depressed or pessimistic. If we were, we should be ashamed of ourselves after the long period of unusual and constructive prosperity. A little letup was inevitable and will prove beneficial as it will stimulate the corrections of extravagances into which we had all more or less drifted."

H. A. Lang, Time-O-Stat Distributing Company, Philadelphia, writes:

"I have read with interest in your column comments by large and influential business men and bankers on past and future business conditions. We represent one of the largest automatic control manufacturers in this territory, whose products are used on what may be commonly termed luxuries. Our products are used on oil burning, coal burning, refrigeration, gas heating and sign flashers.

"In spite of 1929 being our largest year on record, for the first six months of this year we show a gain of 50 per cent in sales over last year.

"This record would tend to knock calamity howlers in the head, and we can only see the last half of this year bringing forth the largest volume of business yet experienced. If business was as bad as some would have the picture painted, it would not appear to be logical that the public could afford to purchase the large volume of luxurious automatic equipment that they have already purchased this year."

STANLEY REBOR, head of the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency, among the largest in the world, mentioned in conversation this week that their business was comfortably ahead of last year's.

During our booming prosperity, orders came easily. Now they have to be worked for, fought for. The workers and the fighters are doing better than the what's-the-use Gloomy Gusses.

STRESSES NEED OF IDLENESS INSURANCE

Overlooking by Efficiency Men of Human Factor Causes Dissatisfaction

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, July 11.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York has called attention to the alleged need of unemployment insurance. His statement of the issue is symptomatic of the widespread dissatisfaction over the fact that the drive for efficiency, ruthlessly applied everywhere, has overlooked the human factor in manufacturing and left the inevitably unwanted worker unprovided for.

That fact, while [illegible] a [illegible] problem, is [illegible] superficially rather than fundamentally. Unemployment springs from two main factors. First, as in the present business recession, it is aggravated by a setback in the income of trade. Such unemployment will be automatically relieved by a revival of prosperity. Second, there is the so-called technological unemployment resulting from heightened efficiency and from the substitution of labor saving machinery for human labor. Henry Ford has hinted at a solution of technological unemployment in his example of a five-day week. The solution may be in a shorter business week and in a substantially shorter working day. These problems require careful fact finding studies by efficiency experts and the economic problems of our times is more insistent. It is childish for captains of industry to assume that a political demagogue will [illegible] all [illegible] in grappling with a problem which so intimately touches the interests of the people.

DISCONTENT GROWS

Although discontent among the unemployed is well known, there is also a growing silent discontent among the vast middle classes, the backbone of the community, which suffered huge financial losses during recent liquidating markets.

I am one of those who believe that the blame lies largely in their own faults: investment technique in their own frailties which during the bull markets induced them to forsake conservative investment for will-o-the-wisp speculation.

Yet it is part of the story of the present situation that many middle-class people—small capitalists—feel that they would be hoodwinked in Wall street. Unquestionably there is a certain amount of contributory negligence on the part of well known financiers and industrialists who issue statements when they are bullish and who retire into a hole and become silent when they are pessimistic. One wonders whether in a more civilized era in the future the great banks and banking houses will not muster up sufficient public spirit to help put the brakes on when unwarranted inflation of security prices takes place. During the last emotional bull markets the Federal Reserve authorities stood almost alone among bankers in putting out red lanterns for the public. Financiers and industrialists who silently acquiesce in unwarranted bulling of stocks help to create situations which ultimately need drastic correction. Such financial readjustments as the country has passed through in the last nine months tend to redistribute the wealth of the country and stir up much ill feeling.

BLAMES FINANCIERS

This effort to find goats on whom to fix the blame for deflation is discernible in this column's correspondence with newspaper readers in various parts of the country.

A reader in San Francisco writes:

"I think the discontent is more far-reaching than the workingman and the mechanic. I believe that more discontent is amongst the business men, and I don't mean small business men, but men of size, importance and standing.

"It is the business men of this country that are wild. We out here wonder just what type and caliber are those industrial leaders and bankers you have in the East. We have no confidence in any of them, wouldn't believe any under oath, wouldn't take their word or trust them again under any circumstances. We read their public utterances with disgust and suspicion. The good, unsuspecting people of this country have been grossly robbed. Things are very wrong when the gang can juggle our wealth $40, $50 or $100 per security when they see fit."

Only the exceptional persons think of the possibility that the fault may be within ourselves.

STOCKS MOVE IRREGULARLY AT OPENING

Steel and Standard of N. J. Advance; A. M. Byers And Union Carbide Decline

NEW YORK, July 12.—(AP.)—Share prices moved divergently at the opening of today's market. Corn Products mounted 1¼ points, U. S. Steel ¾ and Standard of New Jersey ⅝. On the other hand, Union Carbide and A. M. Byers lost a point and American Telephone, ¾.

Westinghouse Gets Freight Rebates

WASHINGTON, July 12.—(AP.)—A reparation award order in favor of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and against the Pennsylvania Railroad, was issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The commission held that rates charged on rough iron or steel cuttings in carloads from Cleveland to East Pittsburgh, were unreasonable prior to November 1, 1926, and that rates on iron and sheet steel, in carloads, from Zanesville to East Pittsburgh, Bessemer, Mifflin Junction and Oak Hill, were also unreasonable.

Bud Oil Summoned In Stock Selling

RICHMOND, Va., July 12.—(AP.)—The Bud Oil and Gas Company, of Charleston, W. Va., together with Harold Sneuwell, president, and C. L. Morris, was summoned today by the State Corporation Commission to appear July 21 to show cause why the company should not be enjoined temporarily from advertising and selling its stock. The commission summons set forth that the company had not qualified its securities and that the two men were not licensed to sell it.

Survey of Trade Forecasts Upturn

CHICAGO, July 12.—(AP.)—Business in the Chicago area was 9 per cent slower during the first six months of 1930 than during the corresponding period of 1929, according to a survey which the Chicago association of credit men has made among manufacturers and wholesalers. The basis for the statement is a check of volume of sales, collections and production.

An upturn of business in the next three months in predicted by 53.3 per cent of the manufacturers of the area.

Duquesne Gas Gets West Virginia Well

NEW YORK, July 12.—Duquesne Gas Corporation announced that an oil well, making between 20 and 25 barrels daily, has been brought in on the corporation's property in Wetzel County, West Virginia. The well is located in territory where the corporation has leases covering 1,000 acres.

Portland Cement Production Higher

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Portland Cement industry in June produced 17,237,000 barrels, or an increase of 2.6 per cent over June, 1929. Shipments totaled 18,780,000 barrels, or a decrease of 0.9 per cent. Stocks amounted to 29,348,000 barrels, or an increase of 6.7 per cent, according to the Department of Commerce.

Fewer Commercial Failures Reported

NEW YORK, July 12.—Commercial failures for this week totaled 428, compared with 435 for the five days last week and 490 insolvencies for the six days two weeks ago. Defaults with liabilities of more than $5,000 declined in each instance, totaling 253 this week, 266 last week and 287 two weeks ago.

Gulf Refining Blaze Injures Fireman

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—(AP.)—Fire wrecked a distillery of the Gulf Refining Company at Girard Point and caused serious injury to one fireman. The distillery, containing 10 large stills, was in the western part of the big storage plant.

The injured fireman, Joseph Kane, suffered severe burns of the arms and legs.

Pittsburgh Company Seeks Pay for Gas

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 12.—Suit to recover $1,304.10 for gas alleged to have been furnished by the plaintiff for drilling a well has been filed by the Manufacturers Light and Heat Company, of Pittsburgh, against S. H. Fife, of Canonsburg. The well was located in West Bethlehem Township.

NASH DIVIDEND CUT MIRRORS SLUMP

Action Emphasizes Sharp Decline in Auto Makers' Profits; Policy Changed

NEW YORK, July 12

Reduction in dividend of Nash Motors Company to a $4 annual basis as compared with $6 formerly paid, places spectacular emphasis upon current conditions in the motor industry. It is the first time since the company inaugurated dividends in 1918 that there has been any downward revision in the rate. Also the revision has been made by a company whose steady growth has been outstanding, and whose financial position has become more strongly entrenched with cash assets than any other in the industry.

HAS FINE RECORD

Starting in 1918 with a moderate disbursement of $1,050,000 in common dividends, the rates have been increased until the peak was reached under the former $6 rate with annual payments amounting to $16,380,000. The new $4 rate on the stock will require the disbursement of $10,920,000.

Judging from the current outlook, another precedent probably will be established this year in that for the first time in 14 years existence the Nash Company will fail to show its dividend requirements for the year earned.

NOW ON $4 BASIS

The $4 rate inaugurated with the payment of a quarterly dividend of $1 a share on August 1 is in excess of earnings in the second quarter. For the first half of its fiscal year—the six months ended May 31—the company reported net profits of $3,715,408 after all charges, equivalent to $1.36 a share on 2,730,000 shares of capital stock, while dividends declared during this period have aggregated $2.50 a share of which $1.14, or more than $3,000,000 will be paid from accumulated surplus.

CUTS INTO SURPLUS

The company apparently has modified its policy with respect to distribution of surplus under current depressed conditions in the motor industry. Three months ago, President C. W. Nash stated that the large accumulation of cash surplus rightly belonged to the stockholders, and, in his judgment, it was the proper time to distribute a little of it to them. Earnings for the first quarter of the year had been only $1,782,512, or 65 cents a share, although the dividend declared at that time was $1.50 a share, of which 85 cents a share, or $2,300,000, had to be provided from surplus.

BETTER SECOND QUARTER

There was considerable improvement in profits during the second quarter. Earnings after all charges, and a liberal reserve during this latter period, were $1,932,896, or 71 cents a share, an increase of $150,384. However, the dividend of $1 a share will require the distribution of only 29 cents a share from surplus which is 34 per cent of the amount distributed from surplus three months ago.

Boy Hiding in Rain Barrel Drowned

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 12.—(AP.)—His effort to outwit his playmates by hiding in a rain barrel while playing "hide and seek" in the yard of his farm home near here cost Frank Samborsk, 5, his life. Not realizing the large barrel was nearly full of water, Frank climbed to the top and tumbled in before he could save himself. His body was found a short time later by his playmates.

Court Refuses to Oust Constable

Judge Thomas J. Ford in Quarter Sessions Court, handed down an order refusing to oust Constable Stanley Rozaski, of the Second Ward, Glassport. Citizens had charged Razaski with intoxication and with visiting speakeasies. At a hearing, the constable denied the charges.

Master Mysteries

By ARTHUR HOERL

His Last Performance

What Has Gone Before

Alvin Merle, famous Broadway stage star, is mysteriously murdered in his dressing room after an evening performance. Robin Dale, reporter, finds Capt. Blake and Sergt. Jardin, of the Homicide Squad, at work on the case. Michael, stage-door keeper, and Murray Clyde, the stage manager, are questioned. All the testimony shows that no one entered or left the dressing room during the period Merle was killed. A single window in the room is iron-barred. A mysterious face suddenly appears at the window. It is Permelia Gregory, Merle's leading lady, who was in love with him. In a theater across an alley from Merle's is the dressing room of Merle's wife, known professionally as Ethelyne Wynne. Visiting this room, Dale finds the torn card of Ralph Byrnes, well-known gambler. The police next day discover that Byrnes and Ethelyne Wynne leased an exclusive apartment in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Byrnes, before Alvin Merle's death. The next day Michael, stage-door keeper, tells of the strange actions of Belle Sergent, a chorus girl, when calling on Merle. Before Belle is traced for questioning she is found strangled to death in her flat.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER VI

In 15 minutes they were all gathered at the flat on Fifty-third street, Capt. Blake, Jardin, a couple of policemen, Dale and after a little while Wilfred Sands arrived.

Belle Sargent was lying in bed, clothed only in a flimsy nightgown. The sash of her bathrobe was twisted about her neck and tightly knotted. The ghastly expression on her distorted features plainly told of strangulation. The bed was in a state of disorder telling how she had flayed her arms and legs in the frantic struggle against death.

Jardin covered the body with a sheet while they inspected the flat. It was a cheap place, but scrupulously tidy. Upon the mantle, like a companion in tragedy, was a large, framed photograph of Alvin Merle.

"Here's something!" There was excitement in Robin Dale's voice. He held aloft what appeared to be a bound manuscript of some kind.

"What is it?" he queried.

"A copy of the play, Paramour."

"What do you want us to do, read it?" grunted Jardin.

"It would be very educating for your mind, Sarge, if you could grasp it."

As Dale spoke he held out the manuscript toward Sands and Capt. Blake. Across the cover of it was written, in large letters, with a blue pencil: "Parmela Gregory's copy."

One of the policemen had been sent to bring in the landlady and now returned with her. She was nervous and excited.

"It's goin' to ruin me, sirs, an' I'm a poor widderlady."

"Calm yourself a little madam. Your answers to the questions I'm going to ask will have a big bearing on the discovery of the murderer. If you answer them very carefully you may be the means of solving this mystery and then you'll be famous instead of bein' ruined."

Dale always admired the manner in which Capt. Blake handled witnesses and others from whom he hoped to get information. He had the landlady actually believing herself a heroine of the affair.

"First, did Miss Sargent have any callers last night?"

"Now you see, sir, I don't usually watch who comes in and out of the house, because I never take anybody but decent people in here. But last night I seen two people go to the poor girl's room. First a lady—a tall lady in swell clothes. She didn't stay very long. Then, later, a man called. He was awful shabby. I wondered how a sweet, pretty girl like Miss Sargent could know a poor old man like that."

"Did he stay in Miss Sargent's flat very long?"

"That I couldn't tell you, sir. I went to the movies after that and didn't come home until nearly eleven."

"Of course, you don't know if the man was still there."

"I didn't hear nobody go out after I came in."

Throughout this questioning, Robin Dale was seated near the window, leafing idly through the manuscript of "Paramour." Despite this evident preoccupation he did not miss a word that passed. The landlady had made her last statement when suddenly Dale sprang to his feet with a cry of exultation.

"Damn, we've been fools!"

"What do you mean, Dale?" asked Sands eagerly.

"We've all forgotten one important thing! No, I can't be sure yet, Captain, will you call the office and see if Dr. Wattles' official report on the autopsy has been turned in. There's one little time element I want to account for."

"Jardin, call the office!" said Blake.

There was a hushed air until Jardin made the connection. He asked about the report. It was in.

"May I have them read it to me over the phone, Captain?"

"Go right to it, Dale."

Robin Dale took the receiver and asked the attendant to read the report. For fully three minutes no one spoke. Finally Dale hung up. There was a gleam of excitement in his eyes.

"Eleven fifteen is confirmed as the time of Merle's death. It's now half past nine. I'd like to meet all you gentlemen at the Christine Theater at noon. I'll be prepared then to describe exactly the way Alvin Merle met his death and who the guilty one is, Captain Blake. I wonder if you'd have all the principals there . . . I know they'd all be interested, too. Better arrange for enough men to cover all exits because the guilty one is going to be present. That one is now resting securely because dead women tell no tales and whatever Belle Sargent knew she's carried to the grave with her."

"What's the idea, Dale, in this suspense business," growled Jardin.

"I'll be honest with you, Sarge—I just want time to get to the office, knock out the story so it'll be on the street while you're making the pinch. I'll even write that in the story for you, Sarge."

"Aren't you afraid of putting the Daily Journal out of business some day by making a serious mistake in judging murderers?"

"It won't be this time, Mr. Sands, but if I ever do I'm going to ask Capt. Blake for a job."

"And you're going to get it."

Thanks Captain. I'll see you all at eleven and then we'll go through the act of seeing a man murdered in a room that it didn't seem possible for a soul to enter."

What gave Robin Dale the final clue to the one who murdered Alvin Merle? How is he going to show the manner in which the crime was committed? And who is the guilty one? What was the motive for the crime? The solution will be published in the Sun-Telegraph next Saturday.

Solution of 'The Wayne Murder,' Last Week's Mystery Story

". . . Ready? Silas Wayne killed by his son!" Dale paused for a moment before he continued. "Yes, I know, Pop, Wayne wasn't married! What's funny about that? Son is still okay. Dr. Bailey is brought into the Wayne home by Miss Sheen, who is his mother, and also Silas Wayne's housekeeper."

Dale, as he continued his report, saw that Dr. Bailey made no effort to get away for, suddenly, Miss Sheen collapsed in her chair and the doctor went quickly to his knees beside her. Capt. Blake motioned to Jardin to take charge of the culprit while he himself remained at the door.

The motive was vengeance that grew out of a bitter hatred Dr. Bailey bore toward Silas Wayne for the heartless treatment of a mother who had given her life to an ungrateful man. The rewrite man can play that angle up, Pop. The crime was committed in a most ingenious manner. Dr. Bailey placed an overdose of sleeping powder in Silas Wayne's drinking water and then when he succumbed to its effects, made a supposed examination of the unconscious man under the very eyes of the assembled household, to whom Silas Wayne's sudden collapse was apparently caused by the dagger thrust. "But this was not the case, for Silas Wayne was alive until Dr. Bailey lifted him back into his chair, during which action he drove the dagger into the old man's heart, actually committing the murder in the sight of eight people.

"The police delayed making the arrest because of another unexpected tragedy following the first murder. Claude Wayne, nephew and secretary to the murdered man, was found strangled to death during the course of the investigation, and later an attempt was made on the life of Gloria Dryden, the ward of Silas Wayne. These crimes the police quickly traced to Stephen Boulter, who is married to a niece of old Silas Wayne, and his obvious motive was to eliminate all the heirs to the estate so that it might be inherited without coniestants by his wife." Robin Dale was watching a struggle near the door. "You can spread yourself, Pop, on account of Capt. Blake's battle with Stephen Boulter, who tried to escape when confronted with his crime. Both prisoners are in the custody of the police and District Attorney Wilfred Sands, who personally conducted the investigation, collected sufficient data and proof to assure the conviction of both prisoners . . . That'll do for the bulldog edition, Pop . . . I'll come right down and fix up a story for the morning . . . and say, Pop, be sure there are some cigarets in the office 'cause I won't have time to stop for any . . ."

JARDINE NAMED TO EGYPT POST

WASHINGTON, July 12.—(AP.)—William M. Jardine, former Secretary of Agriculture, was chosen by President Hoover to be minister to Egypt.

Announcement of the appointment was made at the White House after word had been received from the Egyptian government that the former cabinet member was acceptable.

His nomination has not been sent to the Senate yet and indications were that it probably would be held until consideration of the London Treaty nears an end. Action on presidential nominations is the only function the Senate has while sitting in special session without the House, besides ratification of treaties.

Jardine, who entered the Coolidge cabinet in 1925, resigned at the end of that administration and headed an organization known as the Federated Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association.

McKeesport Starts Rosenberg Club

Political lieutenants of the late David Rosenberg, of McKeesport, honored his memory at a meeting last night in the Elks' Temple by organizing the David Rosenberg Republican Club of McKeesport. Twenty-one directors were chosen, who elected these officers: Attorney Armin H. Friedman, president; Ben I. Rosenberg, vice president; W. P. Broder, secretary; Dr. J. L. Auslander, treasurer.

The late Mr. Rosenberg was a Republican leader in McKeesport for 25 years, during most of which he was a member of City Council.

Nap on Railroad Track Costs Man Life

CORTLAND, N. Y., July 12.—(AP.)—Three linemen took a noon hour nap on the railroad track near Messengerville, N. Y., south of here, and one is dead and one near death. The third one woke an instant before a train plowed into them.

Harry Grodsek, 22, of West Chenango, died of a crushed skull, and Richard Payton, 21, of Whitehaven, Pa., is reported dying in a Cortland hospital from a fractured skull. Gordon Schoenfeldt, of Binghamton, was the man who woke in time to clear the path of the train. His shout of warning to his companions came too late.

Highway Opened Over Mountain Ridge

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., July 12.—One more improved route across the Chestnut Ridge of the Allegheny Mountains has been provided by opening of a concrete highway between Normalville and Indian Head, connecting this section with the Lincoln highway east.

It has been announced that within a few weeks the four-mile stretch from Normalville to Mill Run will also be completed. It is another link in the Connellsville-to-Farmington highway, connecting with the National Pike at the latter place.

Engine Blast Kills One, Injures Two

PETERSBURG, Va., July 12.—(AP.)—One trainman is dead and two others are seriously injured in a Petersburg hospital as the result of an explosion of a Seaboard Air Lines express freight locomotive near here.

The dead man is Fred D. Drewry, Raleigh, N. C., and the injured, Fireman S. S. Taylor, Middleton, N. C., and Brakeman S. S. Wiggins.

Pastors to Speak At Church Session

WAYNESBURG, Pa., July 12.—The Rev. Alden J. Green, pastor of the Sheraden Methodist Protestant Church, Pittsburgh, and Rev. H. L. Morgan Is Granted Pardon And Returns to Anne

CHAPTER XXIV.

Two weeks after the break led and lost by Butch, Morgan stood before Warden James Adams. The official was busy signing some papers, and Morgan stood at attention for moments. His arm was slung up, his body was stiff with casts, but he was in no serious danger. He had spent 10 days in the hospital—the hospital whence he had "taken the gate" once.

Finally the warden looked up.

"I sent for you, Morgan, to give you this," he said.

He handed Morgan a document which was headed:

"PARDON. Know all men by these——"

Morgan nearly fell over frontward.

"But—but—" he stammered.

"It means that the Governor, at my request, has granted you a complete pardon. You are a free man, my boy. FREE!"

Warden Adams walked from behind his desk and grasped Morgan by the hand. Then he sermonized in a stern voice:

"Morgan, I want to personally thank you for saving the lives of those 10 guards—especially of Pop Riker. You are now going out into a world which has been apprised through the newspapers of your heroism, but into a world which quickly forgets your white acts and never forgets your black deeds. You will always be an ex-convict. Every dubious move you make will cause people to wag their heads and say, 'What more can you expect of a man just out of the Big House?' It is hard for me to say these things to you, but I feel it my duty. Don't think that life is going to be rosy. Before, when you left prison by the wrong gate you went back to the old gang and you fell in with the ways that brought you in here and twice back here. I expected it. But I trust now you are going straight."

Goes to Anne

"Yes, sir," said Morgan in a touched but determined voice. Then: "When can I leave, sir?"

"You are a free man now. But you are entitled to a suit of civilian clothes. They are waiting for you. Also," he reached into his pocket, "one of the morning newspapers has asked me to give you this check for $4,280. It is money raised by the readers to reward your bravery and loyalty."

Morgan was too overcome to answer.

Morgan was soon on the train for the city, the gray walls of the prison behind him—forever, he knew. His first thought was of Anne. He went at once to the book-store.

When he arrived there he found her busily engaged in unpacking some books. The minute she saw him she dropped an armful and rushed toward him.

"I'm free—free!" he cried.

"I don't think I deserve all this happiness, John," she wept, flinging her arms around his neck. Then she was sorry.

"You poor boy—all shot up—but I'll get you well."

Knows About Kent

Morgan told her the whole story of the riot, and the only part that he faked was about Kent.

"Kent was caught in circumstances," he said. "He had no part in the rioting, but was forced into the cellhouse. He was a good lad, and the warden thought a lot of him—he was a good prisoner. He wasn't cut out for it, but he qualified——"

"Yes?" and Anne raised her eyebrows quizzically. "Don't palliate his crimes, John," she said simply. "I have been following the newspapers carefully, and with all due confidence in your story, which I am sure is told in double charity, I know that Kent was one of the prime factors in the riot. I feel sorry for his folks—I never became one of them—thank God—and——"

"Anyway, I always liked Kent—he was a pitiful kid," insisted Morgan.

"Let's talk of something else," interrupted Anne.

"What shall we talk about?—we are too happy for words," laughed Morgan.

"That's when I talk the most—when I'm happy."

The Best Customer

"How's the book business?"

"Terrible, since my best customer left."

"Is he back now?"

Morgan put one arm around her and began to look over the books.

"What would you like?" asked Anne in a mock professional tone.

"Something on foreign countries——"

"Hawaii?"

"That's it!"

"I'm sorry, Mister, but I haven't got a thing on the Hawaiian Islands—I have some ordered."

Morgan tightened her in his one good arm.

"Then, dearest," he said, "we'll have to go there and find out for ourselves, as long as there's no books to be had on the subject."

"When?" anxiously asked Anne.

"Last time I came after you I lost no time, did I?"

"But they stopped you!"

"I had no papers—now I've got one—tomorrow I'll have two—you're fifty-fifty on both."

Court Refuses Bail In Murder Charge

Judge Samuel H. Gardner refused a petition asking that Frank Rodi, held on a murder charge, be released on bail. Rodi is accused of having shot James Hannan, 26, of 53 Congress street, in an argument during a card game in a poolroom at 1223 Fifth avenue, April 30. Rodi's petition for release on bail was based on his allegation that he shot Hannan in self-defense after Hannan had struck him.

Senators Tested Again. | Bucs Master Redbirds.
Western Trip May Tell. | Golf and Turf Streaks.
Crowder's Fine Work. | Guessing on Panthers.

WASHINGTON HURLING BEST IN MAJORS

ANOTHER BIG TEST is at hand for the Washington Senators, a test that ought to throw considerable light on the question as to whether Walter Johnson's surprising ball club is likely to falter before the close of the American League season or is going to stay up there until the finish as a contender, if not actually a pennant winner. Like Brooklyn in the National League, Washington thus far has upset all predictions that it would eventually fold up and sink. The Senators have continued to get the steadiest pitching in the big leagues and they have continued to play fast and snappy ball behind it, combining a good punch with a strong fielding game.

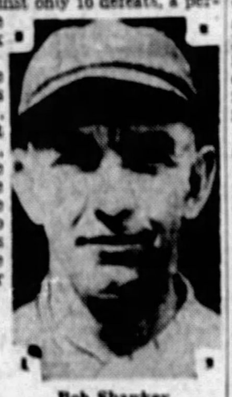
Walter Johnson.

But there are two things about them that have yet to be proved. One is staying power over a schedule of 154 games, and the other is ability to win away from home, particularly in the West. The success of Johnson's ballers up to date has been due largely to gains made on the home grounds. In the West they have fallen down, and the fact that they are starting on another Western trip today draws attention to this feature of their work as an angle from which their pennant chances may be judged.

IF THE SENATORS have a successful trip they will boost their pennant stock many points, but if they fail as they did on their first tour through the same territory it will be pretty strong evidence that they are not constructed of real championship timber. They have not yet shown enough against the West to convince the doubting ones, and their lead is due chiefly to the fact that they have taken 12 out of 14 games from the Red Sox.

On their first Western invasion the present league leaders did not make even a 50-50 showing, as they won only five games while losing seven. They won two out of three in both Detroit and Chicago, but lost the two games played in Cleveland and dropped three out of four in St. Louis. The Browns have been their particular jinx, beating them seven times in 13 engagements, and being the only club in the league against which the Senators have not won more games than they have lost.

BOTH BOB SHAWKEY and Connie Mack have scored heavily over Johnson in competition with the West up to date. Gains in that direction have kept the Yankees in the race, the New Yorkers having taken 28 games from the Western clubs against only 10 defeats, a percentage of .737. The A's have beaten those teams 28 times in 41 meetings, a mark of .683.



Bob Shawkey.

On the other hand, the Senators have captured only 22 games from the same clubs against 13 defeats, a percentage of .627. Not a great showing against a quartet that has three members in the second division, and at that the margin on the right side is due only to gains made at home. The Western trip starting today, and the one to follow in September, would appear to threaten Washington's pennant chances seriously unless the Senators can improve vastly on the work they did during their earlier travels.

A BIG ITEM that may help Johnson's men to escape a repetition of the slump suffered on the first trip is the fact that they are getting better pitching. The work of the Washington hurlers has been the steadiest in either of the major leagues during the last month. They have just set a new major record for the year by going through 10 complete games without a slab change in any contest, and that's only part of the story, for during the club's long winning streak, in which it has won 20 of its last 24 games, the starting pitchers have gone the route in 10 of the last 18 and in 20 of the last 24 numbers. No other staff in the main tent has been able even to approach that record.

SPEAKING OF WASHINGTON'S pitching, the work of Alvin Crowder has been a standout, showing the extent to which the Senators were helped by the Goslin-Crowder-Manush deal. He has won five out of six games, his only defeat resulting from an outfield error, and in every start he has performed brilliantly.

In a total of 53 1-3 innings pitched for Washington, Crowder has allowed only 14 earned runs, an average of only 2.52 per nine innings, and the hits charged against him have averaged only seven per game. Since losing his first game to the Browns, he has beaten the White Sox, Indians, Tigers, Browns and Red Sox in the order named. Rather fair-to-middling pitching.

IF ST. LOUIS were the only club they had to meet during the season, the Pirates probably would walk away with the pennant. No matter how poorly they may go against other teams, the Bucs generally manage to take a brace when they encounter the Redbirds.

Alvin Crowder.

Ervin Brame's well-pitched victory over the Cards yesterday was the eighth scored by the Rovers in 12 games played with the Missourians this season. Yet the Braves, who have beaten the Pirates seven times in 10 meetings, have been able to win only two out of eight games from the Cards. That's baseball.

MAN O' WAR is now a grand-daddy of the turf. Aegis, a bay colt owned by Walter Jeffords, of Philadelphia, is the first 2-year-old sired by a son of Man o' War to register a winning race. He is a son of American Flag and Florence Weber. A remarkable dynasty has been established by the superhorse of 1919-20. American Flag won the Belmont, the Withers and the Dwyer in 1925. Another great son, Crusader, was 3-year-old champion of 1926. Clyde Van Dusen was the first of the second generation to capture the Kentucky Derby. Two others, Dress Parade and By Hisself, in addition to American Flag, have been retired to the breeding farm and also will be represented in competition by their offspring this year.

WHILE BOBBY JONES is trying to make it three straight for the year in the final rounds of the United States Open golf tournament at Minneapolis today, the sensational turf duo, Gallant Fox and Earl Sande, will strive to lengthen their season's record to six in a row by winning the American classic at Arlington Park, in Chicago.

And unless he has gone stale from long training, Gallant Fox probably will add another victory to those he scored in the Wood Memorial, the Preakness, the Kentucky Derby, the Belmont Stakes and the Dwyer. In his best form, no horse in the country has a chance to beat him. The race will be worth approximately $70,000 to the winner, and if Gallant Fox comes home in front his earnings will be increased to $280,000, passing the marks of Man o' War, Display, Victorian and Exterminator and leaving him second only to Zev, the last named horses having set the American record for winnings at $313,639.

reaches of the Interlachen Country Club.

BIG FIVE LEAD

Others, including Walter Hagen, Johnny Farrell, Whitty Cox, Tommy Armour and John Golden, may have had a fighting chance in this last 36 holes down the stretch run. But only the Big Five knew definite potentialities, so whimsical is the fancy of golf that even they were incapable of dominion over their own actions.

"I am the master of my fate," sang the immortal Henley, but he knew nothing of the caprices that lurk in hiding on every golf course to defy resolution and try men's souls. Horton Smith was one of the few who could invite the trial with a fair degree of aplomb.

This 9 o'clock boy from Joplin, Mo., was sitting on top of a 12 o'clock world this morning as the third round of the championship was about to begin. He had followed his par 72 of Thursday with his sparkling 70 of yesterday's second round and so he had the great field trailing his aggregate of 142 right into the final day.

Jones, the man who wants to add the two American titles to those he recently acquired in England and thus create a one-man monopoly over the championships of the world, had to retrieve a two-stroke deficit in order to realize his ambition before the deadline at nightfall. His rounds were 71-73 for a total of 144 and a tie with Cooper and Lacey, and it was taken for granted that he needs must cleave closely to par today or forfeit the honor he seeks.

MAC SMITH FIFTH

Mac Smith rested alone in fifth position at 145, if a man who almost won in 1910 and hasn't won since, can be said to rest. He was a stroke beyond Armour, Cox and Farrell and two in front of Hagen and Golden, this situation making it barely possible that the championship might be won neither by a man named Jones nor another named Smith.

Thirty-six grueling holes will be staged today by way of imparting the final flourish to the championship and, out of this seething day of competition, is supposed to come the man who is entitled to call himself champion. If the name is Jones, the title will not be worthy of the golfer who holds it. He has won everything. He is now attempting to do it all over again, just to be sure. Lloyds, of London, set odds of 50 to 1 against Jones winning the four titles he seeks, yet Lloyds would be glad to lay this price off with some sap concern today, rather than change Jones' ability to come up from the furtive rear and claim the thing upon which he has set his heart.

He did this at Scioto in 1926 when he overtook Joe Turnesa in the closing holes and came on to win. But Turnesa, plausible as he may be, is not Horton Smith.

HORTON WORTHY STAR

The latter is a worthy champion, even if he holds no championship of importance. Turnesa is just one of those young fellows, trying to get ahead. Start Smith off with a 2-stroke lead and he is liable to forget to come back and meet anybody who happens to be following him around. The man has everything in his favor, even strategy.

Actually the thing would seem to have narrowed down to a two-man finish between the Smith who has won everything except a big championship and the Jones who has won everything and wants to make it unanimous. The latter not only can flout all precedent by acquiring the amateur and the two open championships of England and America, but he can win his friends down in Atlanta a snug stipend, amounting to a mere $250,000.

NET TOURNEY HEADS SET

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Smooth, efficient handling is assured the Sun-Telegraph revival of the Pittsburgh public parks tennis championships, slated to get under way on the courts of Schenley, Highland, Olympia, Frick, West and Riverview parks here Monday, with probably the largest entry list of any properly sanctioned racquet event in Steel City annals.

It is difficult to predict with even fair degree of certainty what may happen in the course of a net tourney, for such factors as the weather, length of matches and willingness of contestants to cooperate can rarely be gauged in advance. But as far as capable and experienced committeemen can control matters, the impending parks affair seems destined to progress neatly to spirited climax and successful conclusion.

OFFICIALS COMPETENT

The writer, upon whom, as Sun-Telegraph correspondent and Pittsburgh Tennis Association secretary, it has devolved to serve in the dual capacity of committee chairman and tournament referee, has been exceedingly fortunate in being able to command the loyal and enthusiastic support of seven local tennis men, possessed of real knowledge of the competitive game and of executive ability as well, to care for the details of reeling off a large racquet meeting with jousting scattered over

GALLANT FOX FAVORITE

CHICAGO, July 12.—(INS.)—Gallant Fox and Jockey Earl Sande, two monarchs of the American turf, face a field of 10 3-year-olds today in the $70,000 added classic at Arlington Park.

A crowd of 50,000 or more persons are expected to view the classic.

Gallant Fox, considered the greatest race horse since Man-O'-War cut his record in racing history, was at 2 to 5 in the betting overnight. When he goes to the post at 5 o'clock this afternoon he may be at 1 to 5 or 1 to 10, according to indications.

Should this 3-year-old champion of the year win today's classic his stake winnings for the last 60 days will pass the quarter-million dollar mark.

Opposed to Gallant Fox are: Gallant Knight, Ned O., three crack fillies, Snowflake, Dustemall and Alcibiades, High Foot, Flaming, Dark Entry, Cesare and Maya.

Gallant Knight, considered next best, will carry 123 pounds against 126 on the easterner.

The list of starters together with their weights, jockeys and owners follow:

Post	Horse	Jockey	Wt.
1	Flaming	No Boy	119
2	Ned O	C. Quattlebaum	121
3	Alcibiades	J. Smith	116
4	High Foot	R. Dreamil	121
5	Gallant Fox	E. Sande	126

Shields and Murphy In N. Y. Net Final

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 12.—(INS.)—Dick Murphy, Utica, and Frank Shields, New York, will have it out here today for the singles tennis championship of New York state.

Both players had little trouble in gaining today's round, Shields eliminating Richard Lewis, Staten Island, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, while Murphy put out Vanderbilt Ward, Syracuse, 6-1, 7-5, 6-4.

TIGERS MAY GO WEST

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 12.—(AP.)—The Detroit Tigers probably will train in Sacramento in the spring of 1931, Jack Zoellers, Bengal scout, announced here today after a conference with Lewis Morering, owner of Sacramento Club of the Pacific Coast League.

The esprit de corps of Our Pirates today was a few notches higher than it has been for some time. The reasons you may find in a renewal of the Waner tradition. Brother Lloyd started his first battle of the season yesterday, there was a better co-ordination of defense play all around. Brother Paul had a perfect day at the plate; the Buccos won the ball game, the picture as a whole being one of much brightness.

The Waner Act seems to be on again, but Paul and Lloyd may have to get back to their original lines before they reach the popularity they enjoyed over a stretch of several banner seasons. At present Brother Paul is first in the order of their appearance and that is out of tune with the procedure of the "Act" when it was one of the best things on the baseball stage.

ACT BACKWARDS

It will be more like the original production when Paul bats behind Brother Lloyd, thereby paddling the swifter one around the runways. At this time, however, Lloyd is not able to step out in his regular stride.

Lloyd remained in the battle for six frames yesterday as the Oaklanders downed the dizzy Cardinals, 6 to 2. The convalescent one was a bit unfortunate at the plate, but in the field he was a reminder of the little lad who has thrilled countless thousands by his beautiful catches.

The Buccos are due to say farewell to Forbes Field this afternoon. They will be absent from the city for more than a fortnight after taking on the Redbirds in a single encounter. Glenn Spencer and Remy Kremer are both ready to hurl for the Bucs, and it is altogether likely that Burleigh Grimes will pitch for the Redbirds. Jess Haines will go to Pogarty Knoll provided Grimes is withheld.

CLUBS HEAD EAST

Both clubs will leave for the East tonight. The Buccos will open a three-game series in Brooklyn tomorrow. They will continue on to Boston, Philadelphia and New York before returning home.

Nick Altrock Says:

DETROIT, July 12.—We are off on our second Western trip, here in Detroit. That is a dangerous place for our Washington club to play, as Henry Ford is always liable to buy up Sam Rice and Joe Judge for his museum of antiques. The last time we went around the Western circuit we had plenty of luck, but it was all hard. I see the majors and minors are having a war over the draft. Well, let the younger fellows fight it out, I've got flat feet. Tomorrow I will discuss the question, "Should One-Eye Connolly merge with Three-Eye League?"

M'ILVAIN CAPTURES STATE AMATEUR TITLE

GUNN LOSES EXTRA-HOLE BATTLE

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Greer McIlvain of the Oakmont Country Club won the Pennsylvania amateur championship at the Allegheny Country Club, Sewickley, yesterday when he dropped a birdie 3 on the nineteenth hole to set down Watts Gunn, a clubmate and runner-up to Bobby Jones in the national amateur of 1925. With the Western Pennsylvania victory, the East and West each have garnered the state gonfalon 10 times.

McIlvain had eliminated Ellsworth Giles, of the Shannopin Country Club, who had disposed of the defending champion S. Davidson Herron in the round before the semi-final, by a 3 and 2 margin in the penultimate test, while Gunn had put out Fred B. Weppner, of Stanton Heights, 1 up, to reach the final battle.

MATCH CLOSE AFFAIR

The final was a see-saw affair from the outset, neither of the players holding a great advantage at any time, unless the 2 up starting margin of McIlvain in winning the first two holes can be considered a big lead.

Erratic putting on the part of both finalists had a real bearing on the outcome. They were dropping 20-footers and missing two-footers just when they meant most.

Gunn started the sloppy putting on the first hole when he missed a two-and-a-half foot tap to lose it, and he failed to make similar attempts on the fifth, twelfth and fourteenth holes. He won the seventh with a beautiful 22-foot push, however, a gentle reminder of the long putts that saved the day for him against Weppner.

Watts needed 33 putts for the 19 holes, while McIlvain had 31 not including the eighth hole, where he picked up.

GUNN OUT IN 35

Going out, Gunn was at the turn in 35, even with par, and was 1 up, having won the last three holes of that trek in consecutive order. After winning the first pair of holes, he halved the following four and lost the next three, picking up on the eighth after finding a sandtrap on his second shot from the rough. At that, McIlvain only was one over par figures for the eight holes he played out.

Each had a 39 for the return trip, but it was hard pulling for both of them. They halved the tenth in 4s, and McIlvain evened the match by copping the eleventh with a par 4 when Gunn needed two putts from eight feet. McIlvain's beautiful recovery from the rough saved this hole for him. His out-shot left him only a five-foot putt.

Gunn became 1 down when he missed his two-foot putt on 12. McIlvain scoring a par 3, but the contest was all square again after McIlvain found trouble and conceded Watts a two-foot putt for a birdie 4 and a win on the thirteenth. They halved the next hole in 5s, both of them messing up exceptionally short putts, and the former Atlantan went 1 up on the fifteenth when he scored a par 4 to win as McIlvain was well over on his chip-shot third.

ALL EVEN AT 17

They halved the sixteenth in par 3s, and McIlvain made it all square again by copping the seventeenth with a par 4—Gunn again missing a putt for a halved hole.

McIlvain blew a hard four-foot putt which would have given him the championship on the eighteenth green when Gunn was away beyond the cup with his down-hill chip, and both were in a state of high excitement as they went the extra hole.

The new champion almost put his drive out of bounds, but it was safe—and his beautiful pitch to within eight feet of the cup virtually decided the match. Gunn's approach almost overran the green, and when he missed his first putt and McIlvain dropped his slightly downhill tap, it was all over but the shouting—and there was plenty of that. Spencer L. Jones, of Gulph Mills, new president of the Pennsylvania Golf Association, won the final in the second flight, defeating W. E. Donahue, of the South Hills Country Club, 6 and 5.

James T. Lappan, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, came through to cop the honors in the championship flight consolation final when he defeated Samuel M. Parks, Jr., of Highland, 2 and 1.

James G. Wyman, of Highland, defeated his clubmate, Maurice (Ski) LeBosquet, former Western Pennsylvania amateur champion, 2 up, in the finale of the third sixteen.

T. C. Goldsborough, of Oakmont, won the bunting in the fourth sixteen by defeating Sidney A. Carson, Jr., of the Greensburg Country Club.

MRS. HOLLANDER WINS

Mrs. Louise Hollander, Westmoreland standard bearer, won the top honors in the first division in the one-day tourney of the W. G. A. at Stanton Heights yesterday. Mrs. Hollander turned in a gross of 84 and a low net of 69.

In the second division, Mrs. W. H. Mansfield, of Youghiogheny, with a 96-22—73 led the field, and in the third division, Mrs. C. R. Miller, of the home club, won with 102-30—72.

MEET CLOSES AT KENSINGTON

The New Kensington Kennel Club will wind up a successful meeting tonight, with the final of the first annual derby featuring the closing program.

The eight starters for tonight's derby won their qualifying spurs in two preliminary derby trials, which were run off this week. Both sections of the trial were won by long shots, paying better than 15 to 1. The dogs that will face the barrier tonight are Keno Thought, Bingo ... Spindle Top, Hunters Home, ...noon, Fire Chief, Diamond Crown and His Shadow.

Last night, at Aspinwall, Ray Renown started the evening's program off on the right foot by taking the first race and paying off at the handsome price of $44.20. Gridiron, winning the sixth event, paid $24.60.

Bridgeville will continue its meeting indefinitely. Last night, Champion Spark captured the tenth race, the feature of the program. The victor paid $8.80.

AMATEURS REMATCHED

Carl Mallory, of the North Side, and Frank Kiendzy, of McKees Rocks, have been rematched for one of the bouts on the amateur boxing card at the Fraternity seventh Ward A. C., North Side, next Tuesday evening. Kiendzy won by a knockout over Mallory at the most recent show of the club.

YANKEES VICTORS

TORONTO, July 12.—The New York Yankees defeated Toronto here yesterday, 16-11. Babe Ruth hit two homers.

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

TOLEDO GIRL CHAMP

COLUMBUS, July 12.—Miss Mary Hauck, of Toledo, won the Ohio state women's golf title here yesterday, defeating Mrs. Curtis Sohl, 3 and 1.

WINS STATE AMATEUR TITLE

McIlvain waded through tough opposition to gain the crown. Sam Parks, Jr., of Highland, was his first round victim, 2 and 1, and he defeated J. A. Fownes, of Oakmont, and Ellsworth Giles, of Shannopin, by 3 and 2 scores in his advance to the title duel.

SETS WORLD RECORD.

LEEDS, England, July 12.—(AP.)—Don Bradman, brilliant young Australian batsman, beat the previous world's record cricket test score—R. E. Foster's 287 at Sydney in 1903—in the third test at Leeds yesterday by getting on the enormous total of 308. He was still unbeaten when stumps were drawn for the day with the Australian score at 458 to 5.

TIGERS SPURT IN SECTIONAL BATTLES

Associated Press.

The somewhat incomplete intra-sectional play of the major league clubs, which came to a close with yesterday's beginning of a new East-West movement, brought few surprising results in its general emphasis of the fact that a good ball club is successful no matter where the games are played.

The unexpected downfall of the Chicago Cubs and the rise of the Detroit Tigers were the only results which were unforeseen. The Cubs lost a whole four-game series at Cincinnati and wound up near the bottom of the National League list with two victories and five defeats. The Tigers, smashing out a final victory yesterday, took four of five from the Cleveland Indians after gaining a 3-2 edge over Chicago for a total of seven victories in 10 games.

TIGERS SHOW POWER

Detroit showed a lot of power in yesterday's game, slamming out 18 hits for an 11-to-1 triumph over the Indians. Waite Hoyt allowed only seven hits while the Tigers made eight and six of their runs off Clint Brown in the first two innings.

The champion Philadelphia Athletics won six and lost three in the intra-sectional series, and second only to the Washington Senators, who won seven out of eight from Boston and New York. The Yankees went through a serious slump, winning but two out of eight games.

The Chicago White Sox closed their nip and tuck series with the St. Louis Browns in the other American League game, gaining a 5-to-3 decision to take sixth place again by a half-game margin.

REDS BEAT PHILS

The suddenly triumphant Cincinnati Reds opened their tour of the eastern division of the National League yesterday as Pittsburgh and St. Louis ended the fraternal strife among the Western clubs. The Reds, hitting effectively behind the pitching of Red Lucas, defeated the Phillies, 5 to 3.

The Pirates slammed three Cardinal pitchers for 16 hits to win the series final, 6 to 2, and divide the six-game set, but despite this result Pittsburgh was below the .500 mark in the intra-sectional play and the Cards were at the top. St. Louis won six games and lost three, equalling the record of the New York Giants against the Phillies and Brooklyn. The Robins came in second with five victories and three defeats and due to Chicago's losses, took a firm hold on first place.

Upon the sturdy shoulders of David I. McCahill, Austin Famariss, James F. Olko, Andy Smeaton, Irving Goodman, Ralph Beilstein and Billy Creighton rests the burden of pushing the municipal frays through expeditiously and on schedule. McCahill, Pittsburgh sportsman of note and donor of the famed McCahill Cup, symbolic of the Western Pennsylvania men's singles title, is district representative of the United States Lawn Tennis Association Committee on Public Parks Tennis and will exert general supervision over activities. The remaining sextet of committeemen have been detailed to take charge of the milling in the individual parks.

Famariss, Riverview boss, is vice president of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association. He is a mainstay of Howard Moore's clever College avenue squad, has served actively on the West Penn tournament committee, and is among the foremost proponents of Pittsburgh's ambitious inter-city team program.

DUKE STARS AID

Jake Olko, Highland head, and Andy Smeaton, Frick committeeman, are products of Grant Siverd's Duke varsity array. Olko, cagy southpaw, starred for the Bluffites two years ago. He has engaged rather widely in tourney competition and this season is aligned with the South Hills club in the P. T. A. Inter-Club loop. Smeaton, captain and ace of the 1930 Hill Toppers, battled through 12 straight college matches this spring without suffering a loss.

Goodman, like Smeaton, is fresh from Merion's nationwide inter-varsity conclave. He has just completed his sophomore team at Pitt, and flashed a flock of fine tennis for the Panther, especially in the doubles against University of California. He will be in charge at Schenley.

Beilstein several seasons back copped municipal doubles laurels at West Park, where he will handle the reins next week. With his brother, Karl, he has domi-nated the North Side racquet situation many moons.

Creighton, youngest of a famous Mt. Washington tennis family, is one of Pittsburgh's most promising comers. His brother Jim drafted him for South Hills this summer, and thereby eliminated him from parks tussling, but Bill is so strong for the public tennis game that he was easily persuaded to run things at Olympia, cradle of the sport for him.

JAYS DEFEAT STOGIES, 7-3

Jeannette's Jays came out of a protracted second-half slump in the Mid-Atlantic League yesterday, handing the Wheeling Stogies a 7-to-3 setback. Beams, hurling for the Jays, fanned 10 men.

At Scottdale the league-leading Scotties and the Cumberland Colts battled nine innings to a 7-7 deadlock, darkness ending hostilities. The Colts had six unearned runs.

Johnstown scored four runs in the eighth inning to nose out a victory over Fairmont at Fairmont, 4 to 3. The Diamonds outhit the Johnnies, 7 to 6.

Charleroi staged a rally in the seventh inning to defeat Clarksburg, 6 to 5, at Charleroi. The Guys tallied four runs in the seventh to tie the score and added another in the eighth to win.

P. T. A. INTER-CLUB LEAGUE.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE.

SECTION A.

College Hill at South Hills.
Stanton Heights at Westinghouse.
University Club at Edgewood.
Mount Lebanon at P. A. A.

SECTION B.

Their appetites for action whetted by lay-off of four weeks during the West Penn tournament and over the Fourth of July, stars of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League will resume title quests today with complete program of hostilities carded for both divisions.

Topping the Section 1 list is found the Mt. Lebanon invasion of P. A. A. The Winged Head array, with Capt. Dave O'Loughlin returned to the fold, is intact at last and, despite the fact that the Lebanon host heads the loop standing, reigns favorite to triumph. Meanwhile, Edgewood's champions will entertain the rehabilitated University Club combine in what looms as a hot encounter, while Stanton Heights journeys to Westinghouse for a crack at the last-place Electricians and College Hill and South Hills scrap it out on Mt. Washington in a tilt that defies advance doping.

The spectacular Westinghouse Seconds will mingle with the toughest opposition they have yet faced in the Section II race in meeting Howard Moore's College Avenue luminaries on the latters' lot. Sam Keller will lead a depleted Duquesne Library outfit against Minnetonka's cagy veterans at Verona, with West Penn Power expecting a warm reception at Canonsburg.

BAMBINO AIMS AT TWO NEW RECORDS

By BABE RUTH,
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Baseball's a funny game. A fellow goes out and sets a record that you think will stand forever, and almost before he can turn around some other fellow comes around and kicks the old mark into a cocked hat. When I hit 60 home runs in 1927, I had an idea that there's one mark that will stand about as long as the game does.

Babe Ruth

Now I've changed my mind. I've got a sneaking hunch I can lick that old mark myself this year. Understand, I'm making no predictions. I realize that too many things can happen to change the whole look of things. But I never felt stronger in my life than I do this season, and I don't think I've ever had better timing or had my eye on the ball better than I have this far. Getting my finger banged up on that screen last week was a tough blow for it took me out of the lineup right at a time when I was going good. Just the same I've got 31 homers now and that's as many as I had in 94 ball games in 1927. So I've still got a chance to smack that old mark, and I'll be the happiest fellow in the world if I can do it.

GEHRING SEEKS RECORD

Another mark that I thought would stand forever was Lou Gehrig's record for driving in runs. You remember Lou sent 175 runs over the plate in 1927, and believe me that's a lot. But there's Lou out there this season gunning for a new record, and unless something terrible happens to him he's pretty sure to get it. At the rate he's going now with the season a third over he'll have a new mark of more than 200 runs driven in by the end of the year. And if he does it—you can put it down that there is one record that will stand for a good many seasons, for that's one that not only requires a real punch from the fellow who drives the runs in, but requires a lot of hitting power, too, from the fellows hitting ahead of him. You can't drive in runs you know unless there are men on bases to be driven in.

TOUGH ON PITCHERS

You know the mark I'd like to break this year is for base on balls, and I've got a good chance. That again, though, depends on the breaks. As long as I can keep socking that onion so that opposing pitchers are afraid of me and will keep giving me intentional passes, I've got a good chance. Though this year I'm in a tough spot—for Tony and Lou both are socking the cover off that ball and there's not much percentage in walking me, to get at a couple of sockers like those two.

DAVIES ENDS WORK TODAY

Willie Davies, of Charleroi, ends his training today at his Everett camp for his sixth meeting with Black Bill, of Cuba, in the Meyers Bowl ring, North Braddock, Monday night. He is in fine fettle, according to his manager, Jim Buchanan.

Bill is due to arrive tomorrow morning and will finish his preparation with a light drill here.

The recent clash between these two flyweight stars drew the largest gate of the season so far at the Bowl and the repeat number is expected to improve on that affair as a magnet.

Italy, Japan Split Davis Cup Duels

GENOA, Italy, July 12.—(AP.)—Italy's ambidxitrous tennis star, Georgio Destefani, came through with an unexpected victory against Japan yesterday, but his countryman, Baron Humbert Demorpurgo, ill and suffering, met defeat.

As a result the home forces broke even with the Japanese in the opening matches of the European zone Davis Cup tennis final, the winner of which will play the United States for the right to challenge the French.

Yoshiro Ohta managed to snatch one set from Destefani, the latter winning at 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, but Demorpurgo lost in straight sets to Takeichi Harada, 6-4, 6-3, 7-5.

Long's Sport Comment

from Scotland, Pitt men are speculating as to how his tentative first team will be made up when the practice season opens for the Panther football squad.

If a first team were to be selected right now on what the men have done in past seasons or in spring practice this year, the lineup probably would be: Ends, MacMurdo and Collins; tackles, Tully and Quatse; guards, Morris and Milligan; center, Daugherty; quarterback, Capt. Baker; halfbacks, Williams and Walinchus; fullback, Clark.

Dr. J. B. Sutherland.

BUT THERE MAY be some surprises when the team takes the field in the second game of the schedule and the first real test on October 4 against West Virginia. Hood and Luch threaten to give Clark stiff opposition for the fullback job; Heller, Reider or Brown may press Walinchus for a half-back berth; Hirschberg will not be beaten out easily as a candidate for an end job, and Babic, a former tackle, looks very promising as a guard. Head Coach Sutherland will have a splendid staff to assist him in drilling and shaping the team. Andy Gustafson, former Pitt fullback, who has been coach at Virginia Poly, will take the place of Charley Bowser and work with the backfield; Bill Kern, one of Pitt's greatest tackles, will coach the line; Ray Montgomery and Joe Donchess, all-America tackle and end of last season, also will be line coaches, and Skip Gougler again will be freshman coach.

THERE ARE ONLY TWO OUT IN NINTH

Gus Suhr, Pirate first baseman, took a throw for what he thought was the final putout of the game against the Cardinals at Forbes Field yesterday and started to leave the field, but the umpire at third base called the ball foul and Suhr had to go back to his post. Here he is surrounded by a bunch of youngsters clamoring for the ball that Gus thought had ended the game. The policeman had to help rescue him.

ARLINGTON CLASSIC WINNER TO BE ON AIR TONIGHT

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor.

THE CLICKETY-CLICK of horses' hoofs will beat in listeners' ears tonight as KDKA and WJAS bring us a word picture of the Arlington Classic. Gallant Fox, with Earl Sande up, is expected to win. Clem McCarthy will announce for KDKA at 5:15. The WJAS reporter will be on the air at 5:30.

A play-by-play description of the National Open golf championship will follow the Chicago horse race on WJAS. Ted Husing, CBS announcer, following the players about the course with a small transmitter strapped on his back, will announce every stroke. This feature will start at 6 o'clock.

Jane Froman

It is planned to present the new champion on the WJAS broadcast but if this fails, the victor undoubtedly will appear with O. B. Keeler on the 8:30 program over KDKA.

Jane Froman, beautiful contralto with the Crosley Saturday Knights, KQV at 8:30, enjoys the distinction of being the only blues crooner to have appeared in concert with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Del Staigers, favorite cornetist with the Goldman Band, will play Sullivan's "Lost Chord" as a request number tonight, KDKA at 8:45. Band selections will include excerpts from "Mikado" and "Pinafore."

We'll listen to Marjorie Stewart's new feature on WCAE tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. It looms as her biggest and best effort.

In it there'll be a sketch depicting "Rock of Ages." When you listen to it just remember that the effects and continuity were all the genius of a blind woman.

Another good feature on Sunday is the 500-piece High School Band playing for the Majestic Theater of the Air.

English Comedy.
"Feed the Brute," by George Paston an English comedy that has to do with the old adage which says that "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach." The play opens with a scene in which two women of the lower class are sitting at tea. One is much concerned over her arrangements for supper while the other is content to let her husband fare as best he can from canned food. In the midst of this scene in comes the husband. He has had a hard day and everything seems to be going wrong. The comedy follows.

champion as he took the measure of the Redbirds in the first clash of the two-game series. Brame was close to the stride he had to give up about two months ago when stricken by influenza. The tall Kentuckian held the Missourians to eight hits as he carried on like the smart pitcher he is when in his best form. As usual, Ervin was a factor in the attack of his club.

Southpaw Bill Hallahan tried to hold the Pittsburghers in check, but the youthful hurler was solved quite frequently and to make matters worse for him, his support faltered. The four errors charged to the invaders do not indicate the impotency of the Redbird defense in pinches. Hal Haid and Jim Lindsey followed Hallahan to the slab.

PAUL HITS FOUR

Paul Waner had a big day at the plate. His first four bouts with the enemy pitchers brought three clean singles and a double. When he came up for his last swings he was passed by Lindsey.

The Buccos jumped into the lead in the first inning. Adam Comorosky connected for a ripping three-bagger off the right-field wall with two out. George Grantham scoring on the drive. The visitors were not able to catch up with the home team at any point of the game. The Buccos on the other hand, kept pecking away at the foe's hurlers and took advantage of the loose play that abounded.

REALTORS END CONVENTION

By M. V. BURGESS
Real Estate Editor

TORONTO, Ont., July 12.—Financing the construction of skyscrapers in locations where not needed must be curbed if mortgage bonds are to hold their position as a conservative investment, Sidney Middleton of Chicago, told realtors in the closing session of their national convention here.

Individual home owners, he said, must take steps to protect their good name as well as the interests of the clients. He declared that standard forms of appraisal will help to bond business by avoiding speculation and "hot air" of the days of the shoestring investor.

New developments in the home building field were discussed by Ernest P. Goodrich of New York, Harland Bartholomew of St. Louis, Talbot Hamlin of New York and Blighted Areas.

The first city home planning speech contest was won last night by Meri [illegible] of Kansas City, Mo. George L. Harrison of Atlanta, was elected and Edward Wallace of Oakland, Cal., was third. Two speakers were disqualified, all of them telling of the glories of their home cities. Sharp rivalry developed between Florida and California orators whose speeches came in succession on the program.

A complete tour of Toronto residential and business districts was made yesterday by the realtors. Today a special gathering for the ladies was arranged for at the Royal Canadian Yacht club. Many of the Pittsburgh realtors are accompanied by their wives. Some are planning vacation trips to Canadian resorts following the convention.

WOULD SHORTEN MERGER TRIAL

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 12 (AP.)—Attorneys battling over legality of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company's sale to the Bethlehem Steel Corporation today took advantage of the court's week-end adjournment to plan shortening the hearing by two or three days.

Counsel called a conference to agree upon a statement of facts in the hope of materially reducing the mass of testimony.

Monday Elton Hoyt II, of Cleveland, a partner of Pickands-Mather & Co., ore concern, will be called to the stand in continuance of efforts of those opposing the billion dollar merger to show considerable Sheet and Tube stock was voted illegally in favor of the deal.

Henry Dalton also of Cleveland another Pickands-Mather partner, has testified his concern spent $9,000,000 for Sheet and Tube stock voted in favor of the consolidation, also received a loan of $800,000 from Bethlehem for a few days.

The hearing is on the suit filed by Myron C. Wick, Jr., and the International Shares Corporation of Cleveland as stockholders. The plaintiffs, affiliated with Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland capitalist and generalissimo of the anti-merger forces, contend the merger was negotiated fraudulently and that the terms of four shares of Bethlehem for three of Sheet and Tube are unfair to Youngstown stockholders.

GAS PRICE WAR IN WEST ENDS

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12 (AP.)—Possible termination of the gasoline price war on the Pacific coast which resulted in the fuel selling for as low as five cents a gallon was seen with the Standard Oil Company's announcement it would restore its prices to previous levels.

Within the past month gasoline prices dropped continuously lower because of price competition between the big oil companies and the smaller independent dealers as a result of overproduction.

The lowest price was at Fresno, Cal., where gasoline retailed at five cents a gallon, including a three-cent state tax.

In San Francisco some dealers began giving five gallons of gasoline to motorists who had their cars' oil changed. Washington state service stations sold gasoline at prices from 3½ to 7½ cents a gallon.

Seek Drug Runners As Consul Vanishes

MARSEILLES, France, July 12 (AP.)—Police are investigating the theory of possible mysterious vengeance of drug runners to explain the disappearance of Arthur Reginald Lee, British vice consul and acting consul general here. He disappeared last Saturday about midnight.

Police, after investigation, abandoned other theories and were compelled to consider his mother's suggestion that his activities against drug smugglers here and earlier at Savannah, Ga., and Havana, Cuba, had made him mortal enemies.

Yale Press to Have Larger Quarters

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(INS.)—Yale Press is planning expansion. Now located in the basement of the Earl Trumbull Williams Memorial, the Press in August will move to a large structure facing Yale square, owned by the university. Five large presses are in the Williams Memorial basement and these will be removed to quarters more than three times as large as they now are in.

Real Estate

Faith in Pittsburgh's mercantile opportunities is expressed in the announcement of the C. G. Murphy Company that on October 17 will be opened here the largest establishment in its chain of 160 stores. Employment will be given to 325 people.

The entire first floor, embracing 45,000 square feet, will be devoted to sales space. The building will have a frontage of 50 feet on Fifth avenue, 60 feet on Diamond street and 80 feet on Masters way. There will be entrances on all three street fronts and from Fifth avenue to Diamond street the store will have a depth of 210 feet.

The store will be devoted to merchandise in the 5-and-10-cent range and up to values of $1. In the basement will be a restaurant with accommodations for 250 persons at counter service and with table service available for 325. On the main floor will be 100-seat lunch counters. In connection with the kitchen equipment will be a modern bake shop. On the second floor will be 18 bowling alleys and on the third floor will be a billiard room. J. C. Mack heads the organization as president and has been with the company since 1911.

Miss Eleanor G. Park of the Hotel Schenley has contracted with Henry Schenk Company for the erection of a modern brick residence of 19 rooms at 5429 Dunmoyle street. The house with the surrounding landscaping will be in keeping with this high class residence district. There will be a separate garage. In the application for the building permit the estimated cost was placed at $88,700.

The Kelly-Wood Real Estate Company has sold for Rose Haas to William M. McGonegal, the property at 355 South Atlantic avenue having a lot 35 by 140 feet with a 10-room brick dwelling and two baths.

T. J. McGovern bought from the Kaufmann Realty Company one-half acre with two frame dwellings fronting on Saw Mill Run boulevard at Greenlee road, Brentwood.

GIRL, 3, STRUCK BY AUTO, DIES

Josephine DeLucu, 3, of 148 Meadow street, died last night in Pittsburgh Hospital from injuries suffered Thursday when struck by an automobile at Meadow and Ashley streets. Richard Coscia, of 6387 Stanton avenue, said to have driven the car, posted bond at the coroner's office pending an inquest.

Hurled through the windshield of an automobile George Storer, 7, son of Borough Councilman Thomas Storer of 122 West Fifteenth street, Homestead, today was in a serious condition in the Braddock General Hospital. The boy's parents and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bohammer, of the same address, other occupants of the car, and James F. Tahaney, of 314 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, driver of the other machine were uninjured, police said.

The boy was injured, police said, when the cars crashed in the Mill road near the Port Perry bridge last night. Tahaney was arrested, but later released under bail.

HURLEY FLYING TO VET DINNER

Secretary of War P. J. Hurley and Maj. Gen. Preston Brown, deputy chief of staff, were to arrive at the Pittsburgh-Butler airport today from Washington to attend the banquet in the Fort Pitt Hotel tonight, which will bring to a close the three-day banquet of the Third Division of the A. E. F. Maj. Gen. Brown commanded the Third Division during the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

At first it was believed that Secretary Hurley would not be able to attend, but last night a telegram was received stating that he would arrive by plane today. The election of officers was the most important feature of the final day's program. This afternoon the veterans were to attend the baseball game at Forbes Field. About 600 soldiers are in attendance.

HUSBAND FAILS TO GET DIVORCE

John P. Linhart, Simmons street, Turtle Creek, has been refused a divorce from Mrs. Pearl Linhart by Judge George V. Moore in Common Pleas Court, the judge saying he is clearly convinced from the testimony that most of the couple's trouble centers about the husband running around with other women.

The Linharts were married June 10, 1921, both husband and wife having been married before. They separated August 19, 1927, and Linhart brought suit for divorce after the separation had extended two years. He testified his wife had broken a clothes hanger on his head, had hit him with a club and had threatened to poison him. She denied the poison charge, but admitted they had fought. She and her witnesses said he had been seen with other women and she said this had been the cause of the fights.

Sharpsburg Police Seek Dog's Owner

Lieut. Samuel Fair of the Sharpsburg police today was seeking the identity of the child who lost its pet Boston brindle bulldog yesterday. Fair said he found the animal in Canal street, Sharpsburg, and would keep it until the owner was located.

Funeral services for Frank Cartwright, who died Wednesday, will be held Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Arden B. Holcomb, 257 Noble avenue, Crafton. Mr. Cartwright was born in Wheeling, W. Va. He leaves five children and two sisters.

DRY MEN SEIZE THREE STILLS

Prohibition agents in three raids last night confiscated three large stills and arrested two men.

In a garage at 1632 Edna street, a 150-gallon still, 110 gallons of moonshine and 2.00 gallons of mash were found, according to the agents. The owner was being sought.

In the home of Nazrano Greco at 1803 Maplewood street, a 75-gallon still was seized. It was reported Greco was arrested.

A still of 50-gallon capacity discovered in the home of Joseph Russo, at 214 East Lacock street, resulted in his arrest, agents reported.

Dry Fugitive Faces U. S. Court Today

George Gibson, alias Charles R. Brillhart, 26, who was arrested by the North Side police and turned over to the federal authorities as a fugitive from the government, will be arraigned today before the United States commissioner.

He was said to have escaped from the Erie County jail March 14, 1929, while serving a four-month term imposed by Federal Judge Nelson McVicar, for receiving and concealing 480 pint bottles of whisky smuggled from Canada.

In Memoriam 1-B

In loving memory of Mrs. ANNIE FLEMING.
Two years ago today.
Our dearest mother was called away
To a place of rest where no sorrow is known.
Where our loss will be gained on the other shore.
When we meet and meet to part no more.
And God in mercy will be kind to mother dear.
Sadly missed by her sons and daughters.

SECT

DAILY TRUE STORY

Of course they envied Rita Warren.

Imagine a girl working at the perfume counter in the immense Blake Consolidated Stores having the nephew of Mr. Blake fall in love with you!

And imagine something still more fortunate and replete being Mr. Blake's only heir.

Rita left grammar school and went to work in the store as soon as she was old enough. It was necessary because of financial conditions at home, or, to be more accurate, because of the lack of finances at home.

Of course Rita was bright and awfully pretty. They usually are, the more attractive girls at the counter. At first there was not the rare perfumes that cost $20 for a small bottle. A great many of the poor dears couldn't believe it necessary to buy that sort of thing, and having pretty girls at the counter made it just a little less painful for them.

When Jack came from college he went into his uncle's big store—or rather into the biggest store in the biggest city. There were other stores in other cities.

Jack's uncle wasn't dumb enough to make him waste any of his college education handing up packing boxes or selling cigarette socks to the hoi polloi. He took him up into the executive offices to put him through various departments and there was a great many departments—even to advertising—ahead of the store detectives.

Rita's sister had married an artist. He was no Rembrandt, nor was he starving. He did commercial work and now and then Rita ran up to their studio place. She enjoyed the parties and the meeting of all sorts of people.

One evening an art student friend of Rolton, Rita's brother-in-law, brought along a friend and introduced him. His name was Blake.

Meeting Described

Blake drifted over and sat down to chat with Rita who seemed to be somewhat shy.

"It seems as though I had seen you before, not this land of the old line I mean it," Blake said.

"I know. I'm not a line, Mr. Blake, of course you have seen me. I work at perfumes for your uncle."

"There! I knew it. But how did you know me?"

"Do you think we girls are so dumb that we don't know the nephew of the Big Noise—Oh, I mean Mr. Blake?"

Jack Blake laughed.

"Uncle isn't a Big Noise. He's the swell old boy. Of course he isn't running his stores for charity, but he's square shooting the all right."

And that was the way Rita met Jack Blake.

Right after that young Mr. Blake went around on the south side of the ground floor of the big store to get over to the private elevators to the executive offices on the north side. He did this because the perfume counter was on the south side of the store and more especially because Rita was one of the three girls at that counter.

Of course it made quite a little stir when the girls saw young Mr. Blake stop at the counter and chat with Rita. It made more of a stir when they noticed that he did this daily, sometimes more often.

When Etta Schwartz, who worked at the counter with Rita and had a theatrical press agent for a sweetie, saw Rita and Mr. Blake at the opening of a show and reported it at the store next day, it created more than a stir—one might almost call it a furore.

Emmy Hansen nodded her head wisely.

"Rita is crazy like a fox," she said, "you watch her—she'll be living uptown before long, having her own car and coming in here to buy our $d Ambroietta by the quart."

Since that particular perfume cost thirty dollars the ounce, Emmy's words were perfectly understood.

Etta became angry.

"You're goofy—Rita isn't that kind," she cried.

"Be natural—aren't we all?"

However, Etta was right.

Rita and Jack Blake continued to be mighty good friends. If her pals in the store were envious, it was only a natural sort of envy, because Jack Blake was mighty attractive.

Of course they watched all through the winter watched the engagement finger on Rita's hand, but nothing appeared there.

Aids Brother-in-Law

It wouldn't have surprised Rita to have seen a diamond as big as a walnut—she said as much.

Emmy would have been surprised, because Emmy was hard-boiled and didn't believe in fairies or anything except what was real.

"Bring up your swell boy friend, Rita," her brother-in-law said. "I'm going to have a few sketches around here and it might interest him in some ideas—it wouldn't make me bust out crying if I got a lot of the Blake store advertising to illustrate."

Rita was quite willing. She saw no harm in helping him out, if possible.

Jack Blake enjoyed an evening up at the little studio. Jolly young people came in, and the girls weren't gold diggers, and the men weren't dumb.

One evening Blake said to Rolton, "I'll be in the advertising department next month. I wouldn't butt in now, but when I get in there, hop up and see me—we might get together on some of these things you do."

Rolton was delighted. To be socially friendly with the nephew of the "Big Blake" and to have him in the advertising department was worth while.

"Uncle shifts me around from place to place. I'm to have a year in the advertising and then have a year abroad where he keeps a headquarters for his foreign buyers. Just now I'm in the store detective department. I can see where it's helpful, and I'm not complaining, only I'm not cut out for it. I'd like to see some of those poor souls of shoplifters—a lot of 'em are crooks and a lot are just nuts."

Rita was glad she brought Blake up. Ines so often glad he'd liked her sister and husband. That is, she was glad until Ines Waighen happened up there. Ines, it is true, was the art colony and was supposed to be a sort of sales agent for some of the commercial artists.

She was a type—Spanish type, curled, vivacious and always with an eye—both eyes open for the Main Chance. This Main Chance in her estimation would be a very rich young man, at least a very rich man's son, or old didn't matter so much.

Rita's sister introduced them. Before many weeks passed Ines was sore.

More than that, she was almost heartbroken.

Ines Jealous

If Jack Blake didn't neglect her exactly, but they weren't out so much together and now and then Rita learned that Jack was with this Ines Waighen.

What of it? I haven't any claim on him, he's just a good friend, Rita would say. She was too proud to admit that she loved and lost good an actress to let them get wise.

Rita said openly that it was a darn shame if the rich Jack Blake slipped through her fingers.

Rita never mentioned Ines to Jack. Once in a while he spoke of her.

"Anything going, Rita would say.

One evening Rita dropped over to see her sister. A number of friends were in the studio.

Who should step in but Jack Blake with Ines.

Rita came from the kitchenette where she had helped her sister make sandwiches. Jack seemed delighted to see her. After a while Rita and Jack were over in a corner and eating sandwiches.

Ines Waighen didn't miss a trick. She watched them every minute. Jack didn't notice, but Rita took it all in. Ines became restless and after a while she came over to them.

"Darrie," she said to Rita as sweet as honey, "I'm famished. Couldn't you dig up another teeny little sandwich for me?"

Of course.

Rita hopped up and went to the kitchenette well aware that Ines was furiously jealous and did this to get her away from Jack. She brought out the sandwich.

Sit here, Jack said, making room for Rita so that he sat between the girls.

A little later, when Rita's brother-in-law took Jack out to the kitchenette to show him the mysteries of a new cocktail, Ines turned coldly to Rita.

"Look here," she said, "what's the big idea?"

"Whose big idea?"

"Trying to keep my gentleman friend away from me. He had to be polite to you, but we've got an understanding and hands off. Is that clear?"

"My hands aren't on him. In fact, I'm not interested at all except to be polite to my sister's guests," Rita told her.

"Oh!" said Ines.

She laughed and tried to pass it off.

Shoplifter

She dropped in at the store and chatted gaily with Rita the next day. She came in a number of times. One day she displayed a ring.

"Jack gave it to me," she whispered. "It's a secret."

Rita congratulated her and slept on a tear damp pillow that night.

It was some weeks later that Rita saw Ines slip two bottles of perfume into her bag. Rita felt dizzy for a moment. But she had to do her duty; she would have to account for those two thirty-dollar bottles of perfume and her other duty was to signal the store detective.

Ines moved away. Rita followed her rapidly, finally saw one of the store detectives and gave the signal.

Ines was invited upstairs. Rita was brought along in the little office sat Jack Blake.

"Look here, Jack," she cried, "this jealous little fool has framed me—she wanted to get me in bad with you and slipped some of your perfumery junk in my bag and I demand that she be fired or I'll bring suit against the store."

"Just a minute, Sadie, just a minute," Jack said.

Ines turned almost a mile green when Jack called her Sadie.

"Take her over to the station," he ordered the store detective. Ines went without a word or a look.

"Great work, Rita," he said, "your catching her that way. She is Slippery Sadie Bawter, notorious shoplifter. I've known it for months. I've been trying to get friendly enough with her to be asked up to her apartment—they say it's loaded with stolen goods from half the stores in town."

"Is that why you gave her a ring, Jack?"

But Jack had given her no ring. He made that clear. He had never given a ring to any girl until that night, when he gave a very handsome solitaire to Rita.

"PROSPERITY FOREVER!" IS CONGRESSMAN FRISBY'S OFFICIAL SLOGAN FOR 1930!

Mr. Frisby's poposed home, which will be built by the unemployed with school children's pennies, if the Congressman's proposal is accepted.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT, July.—In order to solve the unemployment problem, Congressman Horace Frisby last night announced that, on receipt of seventy-six cents in stamps and a self-addressed envelope, he would send to any or every unemployed person a mechanical cigarette roller which can be worn on the wrist to resemble a strap watch. For this fast-selling novelty the recipient will pay the postman $2.75 on receipt. Men, women and children earn from $15 to $100 a day rolling cigarettes for the popular cigarette companies. The Congressman gives 50 per cent discount for all orders mailed yesterday.

Paying the Price

Coolidge Refused To at Geneva, Hoover Consented To at London.

President Hoover left out of his message to the Senate the other day all reference to the main reason why the Geneva conference failed and to one of the main objections of our highest naval authorities to the London naval treaty.

The failure of the Geneva conference was chiefly due to the refusal of Great Britain to apply to cruisers the principle of limitation which was accepted at Washington for all categories of ships, but there applied only to capital ships and aircraft carriers.

In spite of the Washington treaty, Great Britain put forward at Geneva a claim for dividing the cruiser category into two classes—cruisers mounting eight-inch guns and cruisers mounting six-inch guns or less.

How disadvantageous to the United States would have been the acceptance of this British proposal was thus set forth at the Geneva conference by Ambassador Gibson, the chairman of the American delegation:

"The immediate and obvious result of acquiescing in these British proposals would have been that the British Empire would have been able to build exactly what it desired, and that we, on the other hand, would be restrained from building what we might consider we might need."

Therefore, our delegation at the Geneva conference, acting under instructions of President Coolidge, refused to yield the right of the United States to build within the tonnage limitation the type of cruiser which we needed.

It was upon that issue the Geneva conference failed, but mention of that issue is conspicuous by its absence from the recent message of President Hoover to the Senate.

And it is upon that issue our highest naval authorities base one of their chief objections to the London treaty.

For our delegation at the London conference, acting under the instructions of President Hoover, presumably, supinely surrendered to Great Britain the vital right which President Coolidge refused to surrender at Geneva.

As a result, if the Senate ratifies the London treaty, Great Britain will build the type of cruisers British naval authorities declare best suited to the protection of British commerce. But the United States can only build the type of cruisers which Great Britain permits, in spite of the fact that the six-inch gun cruisers authorized by the treaty are not the type recommended by American naval authorities for the protection of American commerce.

President Coolidge refused to pay the price which Great Britain fixed at Geneva for a limitation treaty.

President Hoover paid the price which both Great Britain and Japan fixed at London for a treaty—and apparently paid it without a protest.

The record of the two conferences proves the truth of this humiliating fact in spite of the failure of President Hoover to mention it in his recent message to the Senate.

It is impossible for the Hoover administration to deny this odious surrender.

And that it is equally impossible for the Hoover administration to defend it, is the only logical conclusion to be drawn from the silence of the recent presidential message in regard to it.

Building Owners Fight Battle for Taxpayers

In demanding that the city and county administrations give a dollar's worth of service or a dollar's worth of improvements for every dollar of taxes they collect, the Building Owners and Managers Association is waging a fight on behalf of every taxpayer.

The organization that rules the municipal government is very definitely on the defensive in this matter. The building owners have charged waste and inefficiency. Challenged to produce proof, they pointed out, as one example, that rentals in the city market house on Diamond street are lower than the rentals charged for similar accommodations in privately owned buildings.

Recommendations were made whereby the $25,000 annual deficit in the Diamond market might be converted into a $35,000 profit for the city. But Council has not seen fit to act on the plan.

This is but a single example of suggestions made by experts in building management which the administration has ignored.

Public opinion is being aroused over the onerous tax burden and the suspicion that much of the taxpayers' money is being used by the politicians for things that are not for the public benefit.

The Building Owners Association can rest assured it will have strong support in this fight.

More Native Creatures Would Improve the Zoo

Should education, like charity, begin at home?

The question is suggested by the fact that the Zoological Garden at Highland Park has acquired, at considerable expense, specimens of various African and Asiatic animals, while still lacking some of the most interesting wild creatures of Pennsylvania.

Crowds have been entertained by the new arrivals—eland antelopes, a new kind of zebra, and aoudads, or Barbary sheep, from Africa, and a zebu from India. But if they looked for wildcats, gray and red foxes, or any of dozens of certain other mammals indigenous to Pennsylvania, they looked in vain. The zoo does not have them.

Several years ago inquiry among St. Louis school children disclosed that an astonishingly large number had never seen a pig, and many had never seen a cow.

If there are Pittsburgh children who have never seen pigs and cows, there are doubtless many more—and probably some adults as well—who have never seen the common wildcats and foxes of Pennsylvania, much less the rarer animals like otters and beavers.

In connection with the Sportsmen's show held in Pittsburgh last April the State Game Commission exhibited a small menagerie of Pennsylvania animals caught by the state trappers. They aroused much interest and served a definite educational purpose.

But if we cannot afford specimens of expensive exotic beasts, we at least should be able to have foxes and wildcats. Keeper Ernest Tretow says if specimens were to be offered the zoo, he would have to refuse them because he has no place for them. That is a disgraceful condition for the municipal zoo of a city of 669,631 population.

The zoo would be contributing to appreciation of the variety of our wild life, and entertaining children at the same time, if it were to maintain a fairly complete collection of Pennsylvania's mammals. They could be acquired at little cost.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

The Bite of Music

Cornell professor has invented device whereby folks can hear with their teeth.

"Bugs" Baer

You put a straw in your mouth which comes in contact with a vibrating mechanism and get either grand opera or an ice cream soda.

If this business works this autumn there is no excuse for a man biting a worm in a chestnut.

But, if you only have one tooth, how are you going to hear both Amos and Andy?

We can visualize Paul Whiteman leading his orchestra, letting out a yell, reaching for the back of his neck and then rushing to the dentist to have an admirer's tooth extracted. There is such a thing as listening too closely.

Or Rudy Vallee getting a smashed note from an elderly lady:

"Dear Rudy. I enjoyed your megaphonic voice very much on the air last evening. It was delightful. But please return my teeth."

The echo of sweet melody reverberating in a hollow molar or an enamel bicuspid is fascinating in teaspoonful doses of a clairinet or an oboe.

But a bass drum is too big a meal.

The newest startling epidemic of science actually enables the listener or the diner to sip his music in homeopathic globules. He can take a plate of the blue network and wind up with a saucer of DX material.

The mechanism is only a little larger than a baseball before Babe Ruth smacks it. And it can be easily attached to the back of a chair or to the top of a flagpole in case you are that kind of a record breaker.

The only authentic sound we ever heard with our teeth is the rasping of wheels on a frozen curve as a street car curled around a bend. That's a sound that makes your bridgework squirm like sofa springs. And while the Cornell professor may get credit for the discovery we always knew that it could be done.

There are some people whose teeth are so sensitive that they cannot bite into a peach without having a chill run around their shoulder blades and nickleplate their spectacle rims.

We would just as soon listen with our teeth as with our skull. The only difference in the receiving set is in the texture of the ivory.

It's a good idea. And by applying the storage battery idea to them the music might even continue after you put them in the glass at night.

THE EARTH'S ATMOSPHERE

By Archibald Henderson

One of the great problems of science, which still awaits solution, is a thorough knowledge of the envelope which surrounds the earth. This huge ball or globe of ours, almost a sphere, but slightly flattened at the poles, goes swimming through space at the rate of about 18 miles per second. Inter-stellar space is filled with countless small masses of debris—particles of metal, rock, pebbles, sand, heavy dust particles and clouds of dust so thin as to be almost gaseous.

As the earth shoots through this cloud of flying particles, the earth envelope which goes along with it is quite dense. The flying particles of inter-stellar matter encounter this dense, speeding envelope; and are literally burned up by the friction of the encounter. These are often visible through the telescope, and even to the naked eye. These burning particles, which are quickly incinerated, are called shooting stars. Sometimes they are, because of their mass and bulk, not consumed, but burst by the friction and consequent heat that is generated.

Portions of them break through the earth envelope and reach the earth in the form of meteors, which are occasionally discovered deeply imbedded in the earth.

Scientific studies have been made of these shooting stars or meteors, the light from them being analyzed, their speed estimated, and certain conclusions drawn as to the gases which exist in the region through which the meteors pass. The gases generated by the friction cause the incineration of the meteoric bodies.

Above or around the earth, there is an envelope of air some three to four hundred miles thick. This is a protective covering for human life upon the earth; for there emanate from the sun, besides the ordinary sunlight rays, certain ultra-violet rays of harmful character. These ultra-violet rays, of short wave-length, are likely, if unimpeded, to have an extremely deleterious effect upon the human organism. If it were not for this heavy envelope of air, charged with oxygen, water vapor and ozone, which impede the ultra-violet rays, the human race would be destroyed by a fatal sunburn.

Thus far, balloons or airplanes carrying human freight have been able to climb only slightly over seven miles. Investigations of scientific value have been made by means of small balloons, filled with hydrogen and carrying instruments for recording the temperature, pressure, and electrical state of the air at these high altitudes.

These small balloons have climbed to about 25 miles, and findings indicated by instruments show a curious state of affairs. Up to about six or seven miles, the temperature of the air steadily falls, but at the altitude of about seven miles, the coldness becomes constant. The thermometer registers about 75 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

This higher region of air, known as the stratosphere, is apparently not swept by currents. It is motionless and of fairly uniform temperature. At a height of 50 miles from the earth's surface, the stratosphere acts as a sort of very thin, diaphanous blanket. It is only about one hundred thousandths as dense as ordinary air.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

If you discovered that your husband had been unfaithful—if you found that in some brief, shoddy episode, he had forgotten his vows, what would you do?

Would you believe his protest that he loved you all the while? Would you hate and bear undying grudge? Or despise him and inflict continual humiliation as punishment? Forgive and forget? Well, maybe. Wives have promised that—and then made their "forgiveness" a constant and corroding torture. But still other wives have taken their hard blow with gallant generosity — and loved all the more because of the secret shared. As Eslanda Robeson did.

All the world knows Paul Robeson, the great Negro singer and actor, but few know of the gentle woman who is his wife and understanding comrade.

Recently, she has written a story of "PAUL ROBESON—NEGRO." It is an amazing record of the triumph of art and personality over bitter prejudice. But it is an even greater record of the height and breadth and the depth of a woman's love. And Eslanda Robeson's lovely answer to her husband, when he admits his unfaithfulness, should stand beside Ruth's immortal cry to Naomi.

She had said that she would not believe him unfaithful even if she had the proofs. He resented that. He wanted truth between them. Partly out of irritation at what he considered impractical idealism—partly out of a brave and honest impulse—he practically tells her that he has been untrue to her. Then waits, wondering if her love is great enough to stand this cruel challenge. It is!

"I know what you mean about your being unfaithful to me," she said, "but you don't know what I mean. So we're really talking about different things—as we often do . . . You mean that some one may have fascinated you and interested you tremendously, and that you consummated that interest. Let's suppose you did. Would it shock you to learn that I might have suspected as much? Of course, I'm not admitting anything, even now. Why should I admit bad news, if it might not be true. But if I suspected you, I remembered at the same time that in the eight years of our marriage I have been desperately ill three times, with long, tedious convalescences following each illness. I remembered that we have been separated for long intervals by your work."

"Well, darling," she said, looking at him tenderly, "if I ever thought there were lapses, I thought of the possible reasons for them, and dismissed them as not lapses at all. But what I am thoroughly convinced of is this: That, no matter what you may have done in these eight years, there has been no change whatever in your love for me. I KNOW THAT YOU ARE FAITHFUL TO ME IN THE ALL IMPORTANT SPIRIT OF THINGS . . . NO MATTER WHAT OTHER WOMEN MAY HAVE BEEN TO YOU, AND YOU TO THEM, THEY HAVE IN NO WAY WALKED IN MY GARDEN. We have kept that sacred to us. I'm not a fool. I love you so much and understand you so well, and have been so close to you all these years, that I should have known, I should have felt, if you were in any way slipping from me. IF THERE HAVE BEEN OTHERS, THEY HAVE, STRANGELY ENOUGH, BROUGHT US CLOSER TOGETHER."

If you discovered that your husband had been unfaithful, could you be loving enough, loyal enough, civilized enough to say these words which Eslanda, a Negro wife, said to her Negro husband?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Success

How do you measure success,
Must it always mean fame or gold?
Is it free as the wind's caress
Or can it be bought and sold?
Is there a test to tell
After the goal is won
If it be ill or well,
The sum of all you have done?
Here is a man who built
His life with a lie at the base;
But his gold cannot hide his guilt
And his sin looks out from his face.
Here is a man who goes
Hungry and cold sometimes,
Yet deep in his spirit knows
The sound of faith's silver chimes.
This is the truth we read,
This is the age-old tale:
Nothing of wrong can succeed,
Nothing of good can fail.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

There was a Scotchman by the name of MacAndrew that was a catcher on the Aberdeen baseball team. He was going to get married, and he says to all of his friends, "Yes, aye, we're going to have a big wedding. I hope you come to the station to see us off—and it's a good old custom to throw shoes at the happy pair, ye ken. Not neccesarily old shoes, though."

He asked the bride to tell all her friends to come and throw shoes at them, too. So when the shower of shoes came, at the station, it was the biggest ever. And Catcher MacAndrew caught every one on the fly. He used up the first day of the wedding journey trying them on.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

Another very widespread but baseless belief is that in maternal impressions. This dates back to very early time, as is evidenced by the account in Genesis of how Jacob (somewhat dishonestly, it must be confessed) utilized his knowledge of the process to procure greater riches for himself.

Laban having promised him all the cattle and sheep and goats that were "ring-straked, speckled and spotted," Jacob "took him rods of green poplar, hazel and chestnut trees; and peeled white strakes in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods.

"And he set the rods which he peeled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering-troughs when the flocks came to drink: And the flocks conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ring-straked, speckled and spotted . . . And it came to pass whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutter, that they might conceive among the rods. But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in, so the feebler were Laban's and the stronger Jacob's."

H. G. Wells

Today it is in the field of human reproduction that this superstition is strongest. In spite of popular credulity and scriptural authority, however, there is no warrant for the belief. There exists no possible machinery by which a pregnant mother, shocked by the sight of some deformed cripple or frightened by a Negro, could influence her unborn child so that it should grow crippled or acquire a dark skin.

Not only is there no nervous connection between the mother and the child the womb, but no connection by way of the blood. All that passes between them passes by indirect channels, dissolved or secreted through the vessel walls.

How strong the superstition may be is shown by an incident that actually occurred quite recently. A breeder of black Aberdeen-Angus cattle was disturbed at the number of red calves born in his herd.

He accordingly went to the expense of erecting a huge palisade around his paddock which he then painted jet-black, so that the cows at and after conception should never have any color but black before their eyes. But the explanation of the red calves was in reality very different and very simple.

In all mammals this type of color is recessive to black, and his black bull and some of his black cows happened to be carrying this recessive red, with the obvious result that one-quarter of their offspring were pure red. A knowledge of Mendel's first law and a little patience in testing his breeding stock would have saved him that expensive stockade.

The followers of M. Coue, the apostle of auto-suggestion, have asserted in print that auto-suggestion by the mother can influence the character and talents of the unborn child; that therefore, we may presume, properly conducted meditations on Greek sculpture will make him beautiful, and that musical talent, intellectual gifts or strength of character can be induced by the same means.

This, of course, is mere magic. To repeat: "Every day in every way I am growing better—or cleverer, or stronger"—may have an effect upon one's own mind, but cannot conceivably have any upon the embryo parasitic within one.

There is a tale of a Catholic Coueist, a lady of uncertain age, who during confession said she must avow one sin, that of looking in the glass every morning and repeating: "Every day in every way I grow more and more lovely."

To which her confessor drily replied: "Madam, that is not a sin; that is a mistake." But to make such an assertion about the influence of suggestion on the unborn child is not only a mistake; it begins to be a sin; for there is no excuse in the present state of knowledge for making it, and it rouses hopes that cannot be fulfilled.

It is right and proper that an expectant mother should take every possible care of her general health, but hygiene should be rational and as free as possible from superstition.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS: This morning we had breakfast near that shadowy square Place de Terte atop Montmartre hill. From an outdoor table we saw the constant procession of the devout toiling up the long flight of steps to Sacre Coeur, glistening snow white in the sunshine. The beautiful chapel is now finished and terraced.

Through the light mist Paris below was etched in lacey tracing—Eiffel Tower spun high in the clouds, the silver ribbon of the Seine, Buttes-Chaumont, the Arc de Triomphe and the stately obelisk in the place de la Concorde. It is a sight inspiring elderly married couples to hold hands under tables.

The cafe we chose was Nina's—strictly Parisian and as spic and span as it is tiny. One passes through a kitchen of shiny pots and skillets to a dining room holding three tables and on to the small garden of two tables, perched saucily on the dizzy brow of the hill.

Nina was once of the demi-monde, with a fashionable salon near the equally fashionable Parc Monceau. There are faint traces of former beauty, despite the gnarly ravages of gout. If you have won her favor, Nina, who both cooks and serves, will don jewels of her cocotte days and join you for a cordial.

Her autograph book contains names of many American literary celebrities and a clipping of praise of her food occupies a frame on the wall. A sullen slavey at whom Madam incessantly screams imprecations was the only other person about that early.

After breakfast we wandered about the little streets followed by the pack of roaming dogs that make Montmartre nights hideous. Billy was constantly bristling his back and baring his fangs. At the Mere Catherine, the oldest cafe in Montmartre, snowy-topped tables were just being put on the sidewalk.

Artists were taking their places at curb easels for their eternal sketching. A taxi driver who had evidently had a sour night was slumped, mouth agape, over his wheel and punctuating the morning quiet with lusty snores. A bare-headed priest with hands folded behind walked slowly across the velvety green of Sacre Coeur churchyard.

Provincial France now has many communities offering a distinct appeal for those trying to master the native language. They are mostly pleasant resorts on the seaside at Brittany. Tennis, bathing and other sports are offered, but there are several teachers in each boarding house. One must promise strictly to obey one rule and that is that during the stay no word of any other language save French will be spoken. We met a young lady who had spent two seasons of three months each at such a place and she speaks the language fluently.

Along the boulevards may be seen many suits of clothes in pansied pastel shades—light purple, green, blue and one was actually pink. These are worn chiefly by men who affect high-heeled shoes and wasp-waisted coats. Nor do they hesitate to stop along the streets to use powder and rouge. And that reminds me that before I knew it a manicure girl was rubbing a perfumed salve into my lunch hooks today. The idea!

The bicycle continues to grow in popularity. All Paris seems to pedal to and from work. New ones are of silver and gold looking material, and woe unto the taxi or auto driver who hits a bicyclist. He is clapped into jail in a jiffy. The bicyclist has the right of way everywhere. And is far more considerate of pedestrians than a fidgety Frenchman in one of those little go-devil cars.

Another laugh today. In one of those ramshackle, kitten-powered taxis in which you'd have to comb out of your hair if you hit a bump—tape patched windows, hay wire door hinges, etc.—there was a sprightly enameled sign: "Voyageurs! Respectez le properte indispensible a l'elegance de cette voiture et a votre confort!"

* * *

Raymond Duncan's rug shop—at least there were rugs in the window—has a front resembling polished ship beams and is in rue Voissy d'Anglais. His recent American publicity is attracting sightseers. Some of these days I'm going to trot around Paris in one of my robes and maybe I can start a school of esoteric philosophy or something.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You may feel that you can do little good in the world because you have not much money.

Why is it that you associate helpfulness and money when you consider whether you might not help some other person?

Money is not needed so often as kind words, friendly suggestions and a genuine interest in the welfare of the recipient.

Certainly you are not too poor to offer this kind of help.

Sympathy with those who have a hard time to adjust themselves to a load is one of the finest things you can lend.

Cheery words and thoughtful deeds when it comes to the ill and afflicted make an otherwise unendurable day seem shorter.

But you don't like to make personal effort and unselfish attention is not in your line, so you prefer to gauge your use to the world from the financial end of the proposition.

You never aid others when it entails work or self denial and your friends are beginning to find this out.

They don't want your money, they want to find your heart on the right side when they are heavy laden, and if you have the right spirit you will forget your own pleasure and give of yourself.
